THE ALMA MATER

I

*Where the Lehigh's rocky rapids rush from out the West,
'Mid a grove of spreading chestnuts, walls in ivy drest,
On the breast of old South Mountain, reared against the sky,
Stands our noble Alma Mater, stands our dear Lehigh.*

II

*Like a watchman on the mountain, stands she grandly bold,
Earth and Heaven's secrets seeking, hoarding them like gold.
All she wrests from Nature's storehouse — naught escapes her eye.
Gives she gladly to her dear sons, while we bless Lehigh.*

III

*We will ever live to love her, live to praise her name;
Live to make our lives add lustre to her glorious fame.
Let the glad news wake the echoes, joyfully we cry, Hail to thee, our Alma Mater! Hail! All Hail! Lehigh!*

“Greater Lehigh”

“GREATER Lehigh” means a Lehigh that is fully alive to the needs of modern life and that, unhampered by tradition, is prepared to meet these needs in so far as they can be met through education and research. It entails a very greatly increased endowment in order that the University may develop a larger faculty, with a greater number of members who are recognized authorities in their subjects, and provide it with all the facilities it needs for the work of undergraduate and graduate instruction and for the conduct of a high order of scientific research. It means the addition of many new buildings with thoroughly modern and well-appointed laboratories; and it means the expansion of the University’s facilities to care for the health and to provide for the physical comfort of the student. It means the development of the highest ideals of the purpose for which the University exists and the development of means for the attainments of these ideals. It means the conversion of Lehigh University from a college into a University.

No institution can long continue to go forward under momentum created by past achievements and glorious traditions. It cannot long mark time. It must progress or drop out of the race for supremacy. Any tradition that leads to complacent satisfaction or that in any manner hampers progress, is a bad tradition and should be uprooted and cast aside. Progress can never be made by burning incense to the memories of the past, but only through the successful forecast and solution of the problems of the future.

We feel that in the last few years we have taken definite steps forward, yet despite the progress made, it must be regarded as only a beginning. If the ideal of a “Greater Lehigh” is to be fully realized it will require the unflagging enthusiasm and effort of every friend of the University, among the Trustees, the Faculty, the Alumni, and the students to bring about those things that are necessary to its attainment.

THE EPITOME stops for a moment to acknowledge the indebtedness to the past; to those that have built; to those who have toiled; to those that by their planning and direction have made the Lehigh of today possible. We stand respectfully before Asa Packer, whose original endowment and whose concept, "—of a new University in Lehigh Valley—to give a complete professional education which would benefit the whole country—which will enable its graduates to play intelligent parts in exploring and developing the resources of all parts of the United States," created the school materially and educationally; to Dr. Henry Coppee, the first President who served it well; to Dr. J. M. Leavitt; to Dr. R. A. Lambert, who enlarged the scope of the field of the School of Technology; to Dr. Chandler; to the cultured personality of Dr. Drown; and to Dr. Drinker, now President Emeritus, who clearly saw the problems of the new University and who in a businesslike way proceeded to solve them.

To all these and to many more, whose finances, whose work, whose inspiration and whose high hopes have made the Lehigh of today possible, we acknowledge our debt. We give thanks for an illustrious past and only ask that we may all add our bit to her more illustrious future.

NATT MORRILL EMERY, M. A., Ph. D.
Vice-President and Comptroller

CHARLES MAXWELL MCCONN, M. A.
Dean of the University

MEN are developed rather more by human contacts than by books, lectures or physical equipment. Dr. Emery, for years a member of our faculty, for sixteen years Vice-President and for the past four years Vice-President and Comptroller, has made his greatest contribution to Lehigh in the encouragement and the example that he has given to her sons.

Now, as Vice-President and Comptroller he has charge of the plant and accounts of the University and as the Director of the Summer Session he still adds his bit to the educational advancement of the school.

For reputation and for fame Lehigh must look to her alumni. And many are her sons who were urged on and heartened by Natt Emery, so well known among undergraduates and so kindly remembered among alumni.

TO THE initiative and the courage of Charles Maxwell McConn, Lehigh's first and present Dean, are to be attributed many of the recent improvements at Lehigh in organization, administration and methods.

Dean McConn came to Lehigh from the University of Illinois, where he had served eighteen years; four of them as principal of the Academy, ten as registrar, and the last two as assistant to the president.

His record at Lehigh is one of accomplishment. While not always escaping the displeasure of excited students, he has achieved four important changes, for to his credit is the present modern system of records, registration and reports now in use; the enforcement of campus prohibition; a system reducing the number of absences; and a workable probation rule.

ARCHITECTS' PRELIMINARY DRAWING OF THE JAMES WARD PACKARD LABORATORY

The Work of the Administration, 1926-1927

THE year 1927 will stand out in Lehigh's history as significant of the beginning of the actual realization of President Richards' dream of Lehigh as the recognized leader in technical education, for it witnessed the donation of the James Ward Packard Engineering Laboratory, by James Ward Packard, '84. This gift will bring to Lehigh the finest and most modern electrical and mechanical engineering laboratories in the world, offering facilities that will be well-nigh irresistible to outstanding teachers and providing inspiration as well as unrivaled practical instruction for engineering students for many years to come.

This magnificent addition to Lehigh's plant is of tremendous significance, not merely because it is by far the largest single contribution to Lehigh since its establishment, but also because it represents love of a Lehigh man for his Alma Mater and because it demonstrates that the Greater Lehigh program is rapidly evolving from a vision to reality before our eyes. It is significant that a man with the engineering genius and the keen business ability that made the Packard automobile the recognized standard of excellence, should choose Lehigh as the place to make this investment for the training of future generations. His choice is perhaps the finest compliment that could be paid to Lehigh, and to the administration.

The James Ward Packard Laboratory will be the largest of the University buildings. It is to have an overall width of 225 feet and a depth of 184 feet. It is designed in the Collegiate Gothic style with exterior walls of native stone trimmed with cut limestone. The building itself will be of reinforced concrete. It is planned with an ample number of offices, lecture rooms, and seminars and is to be equipped with heating, lighting, and ventilating systems of the most modern and effective type. The whole rear portion of the building is devoted to the spacious laboratory divided between the electrical and mechanical engineering departments. Here will be located all the heavy and bulky laboratory equipment. Below, in the basement, will be a complete electrical substation, a high voltage and a traction laboratory, storage battery room, etc., while the portion assigned to mechanical engineering will contain concrete flumes and sumps for the measurement and storage, of large volumes of water required for testing pumps and condensers. Well-equipped mechanic's shops and lecture rooms are to be conveniently located with reference to the main laboratory. Several small laboratories will be provided for the study of problems peculiar to electrical communication, including wireless and wired telegraphy and telephony. Ample provision is to be made for the standardization of measuring instruments. Drafting rooms for freshmen, sophomores and juniors, a museum for the display of apparatus required for the study of machine and electrical design, an engineering library and reading room and a well-equipped auditorium, seating about five hundred are provided in the plans.

The donor of this splendid building, James Ward Packard, was born in Warren, Ohio, on November 5, 1863. His forefathers were early pioneers in eastern Ohio, having settled in the Western Reserve shortly after the close of the Revolutionary War.

Mr. Packard attended the public schools in Warren, Ohio. In the fall of 1880 he entered Lehigh University with the class of 1884. He was graduated with the degree of Mechanical Engineer at the age of twenty-one. After being graduated, Mr. Packard went to New York, where he obtained a position with the Sawyer-Mann Electric Company, and later became superintendent of the incandescent lamp factory of this company. As the incandescent lamp business was then in its infancy, it was a fertile field for Mr. Packard's inventive and mechanical ability.

In 1890, Mr. Packard left New York and returned to Warren, Ohio, where he established the Packard Electric Company and a subsidiary concern, the New York and Ohio Company, and engaged in the manufacture of incandescent lamps. The New York members of the subsidiary company were Lehigh men.

Mr. Packard was early interested in mechanical traction and after considerable preliminary work brought out in 1890 the first Packard automobile. A special department of the company was organized and in it were produced the first commercial models of Packard cars. These were propelled by single cylinder gasoline engines and had suspension wire wheels with three-inch pneumatic tires. They were capable of a speed of about thirty miles an hour and sold for $1,200. By 1903 the product had been brought strictly up to date and embodied the most modern practice and devices, including vertical engine in front, shift gears, wheel steering, etc. Additional capital, furnished by Detroit financiers, was put in, and the company moved to Detroit. Mr. Packard was president of the organization from its organization until 1915, and chairman of the Board of Directors. It is interesting to note that the original stockholders in the Packard Company still hold a dominating interest in the concern.

Mr. Packard was married in 1904 to Elizabeth Achsah Gillmer, daughter of Judge and Mrs. T. I. Gillmer, of Warren, Ohio, and they make their residence at Lakewood, New York and Warren.

Mr. Packard has retired from active participation in business, but still keeps a keen interest in the various enterprises in which he has been concerned. He is a member of the Engineers Club of New York City, the Automobile Club of America, the Detroit Club, of Detroit, Michigan, the Union Club, of Cleveland, Ohio, and is an honorary life member of the B. P. O. Elks.

The new laboratory will not only provide superb accommodations for the Electrical and Mechanical Engineering Departments, but it will also make new and better quarters available for other Departments. Thus, the entire Physics Building will be occupied by the Physics Department, and will undoubtedly be remodelled to provide every modern facility for instruction and advanced scientific work. Half of Williams Hall will be available for the Department of Metallurgy, and possibly the Department of Philosophy, and Psychology, thus providing needed space for the expansion of the Departments of Chemistry and Mathematics.

During the present year, the Arts College and the College of Business Administration have oriented themselves to the excellent quarters provided by the remodelling of old Christmas and Saucon Halls. The joining and refinishing of these two historic structures provided, in the new Christmas-Saucon Hall, spacious and convenient housing for Business Administration and English; at the same stroke Coppee Hall was given over entirely to the Arts College, providing accommodations that should be adequate for some years. Christmas-Saucon Hall is decidedly an impressive addition to the campus, even more attractive and useful than expected, and yet preserving the identity of the two original buildings.

This outline of current physical improvements would not be complete without mention of minor but noticeable and commendable steps taken in the past year such as the redecoration of Drown Hall, Packer Hall and the general "sprucing-up" of the University grounds. The rebuilt swimming pool with its fine system of water purification is another of the welcome improvements of 1926. The remodelling of the Commons into the Armory, and the gloomy basement of Drown Hall into a popular cafeteria are additional examples of the far-sighted efficiency of the administration.

Although these physical developments are more spectacular, there have been improvements in personnel and policies throughout the University that are no less interesting.

Applications for admission have increased to an unprecedented figure, necessitating selective systems for admission, and this in spite of the increase of tuition cost to $400 beginning September, 1928. Academic departments have been materially strengthened by the addition of numerous outstanding educators to the Faculty. Considerable attention has been given by the Administration to athletics, and it begins to look as though the time is near at hand when students, alumni, faculty and administration will come to a common understanding on this battle-scarred ground and give birth to a Lehigh system of handling intercollegiate sport that will satisfy all groups.

The present year marked a change in the trend of administrative activity, caused by the gift of the James Ward Packard Engineering Laboratory. Whereas much attention had been given previously to the strengthening of the non-technical curricula, where the need was most urgent, now we have interest focused on the engineering college which has always been Lehigh's pride. Now that the Arts and Business Colleges are up to the traditional Lehigh standard, the program calls for the establishment of an even higher standard in engineering—a reputation second to none. However, this does not imply that progress will cease in other departments; even now, plans are under way for the enlargement of the Library and the extension of work and facilities in the cultural and humanistic departments.

The numerous physical changes mentioned have obviously involved the expenditure of large sums and will naturally result in increased maintenance costs. Practically every improvement causes an increase in the University's budget for the year's operation. This constantly growing expense has been met very largely by the doubling of Lehigh's General Endowment Fund as a result of the generosity of her Alumni. The Endowment Campaign, which was launched in 1923 has practically come to a close with more than two million dollars added to Lehigh's productive capital. This endowment fund is yielding the income which defrays the added operating expenses. In addition, however, the Alumni have undertaken in the last year to contribute each year directly to Lehigh's income with the result that each June henceforth a tidy sum will be presented by the Alumni to the University to spend for current purposes. This year the University will probably benefit to the extent of about twenty-thousand dollars. Another important source of new revenue to provide for newly recurring expenses is the increased tuition fee which goes into effect September, 1928, when the tuition in all departments will be raised to four hundred dollars.

When President Richards presented his "Survey of the Needs of Lehigh" in 1923, the most optimistic Lehigh man was staggered by the immensity of the undertaking proposed, and hardly dared dream that it might be realized. It is significant that the survey still stands as Lehigh's plan and that Dr. Richards has never wavered on his course to the goal he set for himself. But now, if we check off the many items that have materialized in a short four years, even the most sceptical must agree that the Greater Lehigh is no longer a catch phrase, but a splendid actuality just around the corner.

The College of Arts and Sciences

HEREAFTER comprehensive examinations in major subjects will become an important element in the courses of the College of Arts and Sciences. The principle was accepted by Lehigh's Faculty last December, when it approved previously recommended changes in the policy of the Arts College.

Realizing that a general course does not necessarily require independent investigation, and likewise lacks many of the influences which encourage creative thinking, the Arts Council devised this new scheme as a means of overcoming the errors of the non-concentrated course.

The new policy provided particularly for a more highly developed research in a specialized branch of study. It requires that a major be selected during the second term of the sophomore year. This major will be pursued under the supervision of the head of the major department until graduation. Study in its field will be much more detailed and inclusive than is necessary in other subjects. At the conclusion of the course a comprehensive examination will be given which will have to be passed with a seventy per cent. average before a diploma will be awarded.

Some of the benefits expected to come of this major specialization include the power to concentrate upon a "bulk subject" and to resolve it to its component parts. It will be necessary to read widely, to appraise judiciously the contemporary authorities and then to form a personal reaction. Another benefit claimed is the experience which will come of free and little-restricted study, the absence of direction being expected to train the student in self-reliance and self-election.

Still another element in the new system is a comprehensive examination in English for all arts students who show a deficiency in that subject. Those who fail to pass the test will carry English during the senior year, but will not receive credit toward graduation for it.

It is predicted that these requirements will improve the work of undergraduates and will insure a greater likelihood of after-graduation success. Nor is it improbable that a similar plan will be adopted in the other colleges at Lehigh, provided satisfactory results accrue to the Arts College.

The College of Arts and Sciences, dating from the incorporation of the University, in whose first register it was designated as the School of General Literature, has the largest individual group enrollment in the University.

Under Prof. P. M. Palmer, who became Head of the College of Arts and Sciences in 1921 upon the death of Prof. Robert W. Blake, the courses have been consistently improved to keep pace with present-day demands. A new department, that of History, has been added with Dr. Laurence H. Gipson, an authority in his field, as its head. And in the near future a department of Fine Arts will be established.

No department pays finer tribute to Lehigh's founder than the College of Arts and Sciences. Provided for by Judge Packer, even while he was primarily interested in the "polytechnic character" of his school, it has grown to a place of wide and honorable recognition and has graduated many of Lehigh's most successful and creditable sons.

The College of Business Administration

THAT the most vital of all sciences, that of making a living, should be the last to be studied is rather astounding. The reason lies deep in our social conditions. Business in all ages before the present has been a matter of haphazard, experimental, hit-or-miss guess work. Only in this generation has it been discovered that production can be reduced to principles, that accounting is more than counting the cash, that risk can be eliminated by appeal to the laws of probability, and that business developments can be foretold and anticipated. The extraordinary growth of business courses in the face of the skepticism of old-fashioned business men, as well as old-fashioned educators, is proof of the need for such training.

It was more than a generation ago that courses in economics began to appear in University curricula. They were popular. In due time courses in applied economics were added, and departments of economics were created. Eventually separate colleges of business administration were established, with carefully worked out four-year curricula, so that students could make the study of economic activity the primary objective of their college life. The expansion of these colleges of business administration has been an outstanding development in the academic history of our time.

Lehigh's College of Business Administration has gone through this same evolutionary process from the introduction of one course in economics thirty years ago, through a department of economics and history, to a separate college established in 1918. With a view to preventing over-expansion, the University trustees have limited the enrollment to 300, but the applicants have exceeded this limit for the last two years.

The Lehigh curriculum is based on certain principles: first, that every graduate shall be an educated man, with a knowledge of the historical, cultural and scientific background of economic life; secondly, that every graduate shall be trained in all the fundamentals of business; and thirdly, that specialization in any field, though it is encouraged, shall not be permitted to encroach on work in fundamental economics, accounting, finance and statistics.

Consequently, the curriculum calls for an unusually high percentage of work in history, languages and social science, has a rigidly outlined schedule of courses in business and economic principles, and permits a rather limited degree of specialization in any single field. The curriculum as a whole demands of the student more than is required by the usual curriculum in business administration, but solely with the idea that these requirements make it more valuable to the Lehigh student.

The Colleges of Engineering

The Department of Chemistry and Chemical Engineering

CHEMISTRY is striding forward into new frontiers which expand it in its philosophic and economic applications. It is one of the obviously progressive branches of intellectual activity. An abundance of achievement is to be won, both in pursuing the science of chemistry for the sake of advancing human knowledge and well-being, as well as in advancing purely industrial progress by employing chemistry in the processes of engineering.

The Chemistry Department at Lehigh offers training specifically adapted to both of these ends. The four years in chemistry carry a considerable and varied supplement of cultural courses other than science. These cultural courses, language, history and others, not only furnish a background for the science of living a fully rounded life, but are, furthermore, workaday tools in the development of clear and keen thinking.

The preparation for a career in chemical engineering includes a comprehension of the work and methods of other types of engineering and affords the student a highly valued contact with teachers and students in other engineering departments about the campus.

If engineering, as Webster's Dictionary defines it, is, "The art and science by which mechanical properties of matter are made useful to man in structures and machines," then chemical engineering is that extension of general engineering which utilizes chemical properties as well as mechanical properties.

In its relation to chemistry and to chemical engineering, the department at Lehigh is primarily interested in the guidance of oncoming chemists and chemical engineers, and furthers this need by a congenial and cheerful spirit of co-operation between student and teacher which is constantly fostered as its greatest asset. The department carries forward a continuous output of scientific research through graduate scholarships and fellowships supported by monetary grants from individuals and from industrial corporations.

The Department of Civil Engineering

THE Department of Civil Engineering has this year passed the threescore mark, during which time they have trained men with vision and courage who have become builders and creators; men with the ability to overcome the obstacles of the Panama Canal; men who designed the Grand Central Terminal; men who constructed the Metropolitan Tower. From the days when Professor McMillan took charge of the course, the department has striven to keep abreast of the times, and in so doing its students have been well in the front rank of the engineering profession.

The course today provides training in all the major branches of the field. The first two years are essentially devoted to a general preparation in the sciences preliminary to the work of specialization. The junior and senior years consist of instruction in structural design, highways, railroads, hydraulics and sanitary engineering. That the engineer should be versed in the rudiments of business is essential, and courses in economics, finance and accounting are given. The theoretical work in all subjects is successfully combined with laboratory and field work in surveying and geodesy. Field trips to great engineering works are provided for, so that the student may be alert to the possibilities of his chosen work and likewise be inspired to carry on the accomplishments of other Lehigh men in this vast field.

The Department of Electrical Engineering

LEHIGH UNIVERSITY was one of the first institutions to offer a course in applied electricity. As early as 1883 the register shows provision for a one-year course of this kind. Although the field was then undeveloped and the available material meager, the foundation was laid which bore fruit in a Department of Electrical Engineering in 1903 with Prof. William Esty, the present incumbent, as its head.

The course in electrical engineering now offered aims to lay a broad foundation in the principles of physics, chemistry and mathematics as a basis for the further engineering work, with provision being made for the study of the more broadening subjects in other departments. Specialization begins in the Junior year and is effected more completely in the senior term with extensive laboratory work entering in as an important factor.

Among Lehigh's prominent alumni in this field are Lewis Beckley Stillwell, '85, a noted inventor and designer of large traction systems, and William Spencer Murray, '95, the father of the idea of "super power" in this country. From the records of the electrical graduates, it is found that 84 per cent. have followed the work for which their course was presumably a specific training and their success has given Lehigh men an enviable fame in the rapidly developing field of electrical engineering.

The Department of Mechanical Engineering

THE curriculum of the Department of Mechanical Engineering may be characterized as emphasizing the following: mathematical and scientific analysis of engineering principles; the reduction of shop work to a minimum; and the utilization of the industries in the vicinity of the University as supplementary laboratories. The curriculum in mechanical engineering at Lehigh University was inaugurated in the year 1867, and was administered jointly with the Civil Engineering Department until 1881, occupying at that time the basement and the first floor of Packer Hall. In 1881 Professor Klein took charge of the department, and until his death in 1918, his bold and far-sighted personality shaped and directed the department.

The W. A. Wilbur Engineering Laboratory was made available in 1902. Williams Hall was opened the following year and has housed the department since that time. The course has always been rigorous, comprehensive and difficult, with the result that many of the presidents, the general managers and the chief engineers of the leading industries of the country are notable living "To make their lives add luster to Lehigh's glorious fame."

The Department of Mining Engineering

THE mining engineer of today has to do primarily with the discovery, development and subsurface operation of coal and ore mines, quarries, oil and gas wells and other mining deposits. In addition he must be able to apply his general technical and business knowledge to the layout, construction, operation and maintenance of a surface plant, in conjunction with the subsurface operations.

The successful accomplishment of this requires the application of knowledge acquired in all branches of engineering, and for this reason the curriculum in mining engineering offers a greater variety of studies in every phase of the engineering field than any other, resulting in a general technical, scientific and business education of the broadest character.

The opening and operation of a mineral field, whether at home or in a foreign country, is always one of absorbing interest, with a sufficient element of chance existing to add an increased attraction to the undertaking, and one which at all times calls for the best efforts of which a man is capable.

In view of these facts, probably no other profession offers a more varied and interesting experience than that of the mining engineer.

The Department of Metallurgical Engineering

THE great specialization in modern industry creates a demand for the highly trained engineer who is experienced in the properties and uses of metals. Men with such training are employed in almost every kind of industrial, fabricating or engineering company, studying, testing, specifying and purchasing metals, as well as in manufacturing metallurgy, the largest manufacturing industry in the world. It is the object of the course of study in metallurgical engineering to prepare men for this work.

Metallurgical training must of necessity be very broad and general, because a knowledge of physics, chemistry and mechanics is necessary to understand the properties and behavior of metals; because one must have a grasp of an industry as a whole in order to be able to apply metals in a particular phase of it; and because the diversity of industries employing metallurgists makes a broad technical education essential.

The Department of Industrial Engineering

DURING the last forty years a vital transformation has taken place in American industry. The era of exploitation and expansion has given way to an era of development in organization, and with this change has come the demand for a new type of business man, namely, the man who possesses both technical and administrative ability. Accordingly, it has become necessary to include in the engineering curricula the fundamentals of finance, accounting and management to provide such a training.

In 1925 the curriculum of industrial engineering was established at Lehigh with the maintenance of these standards as the first consideration. It is primarily an engineering curriculum and has been conceived in the light of twenty years of experience in the development of similar courses at other institutions. This curriculum has been adopted only after a study of this experience has indicated that the University's facilities and its location in the very heart of the eastern industrial section warrant such action.

The Department of Physics

PHYSICS with chemistry, bound together with the mortar of mathematics, composes the solid basis of scientific theory and fact upon which the superstructure of applied science and engineering technology is reared. Lord Bacon termed this study as necessary for the betterment of society, a judgment which has been fully vindicated by the tremendous scientific development of our modern civilization.

In the presentation of physics to the student, the department considers it primarily as a tool to aid the mind in mastering other subjects, just as machines and metal tools increase many-fold the power of the hand and arm. Therefore, all engineering students are required to take sixteen hours of undergraduate physics, which gives them the fundamentals of the science. For those whose work calls for a deeper penetration into the subject than the first two years afford, advanced courses are given.

The Department of Mathematics and Astronomy

MATHEMATICS serves alike as a tool for the engineer and as a rigorous cultural and intellectual discipline for the Liberal Arts student. The aim of the department has always been to prepare the student in this most fundamental scientific subject. The realization of this aim involves drill, explanation, practice and testing of the students, yet the staff also engages in research, both in astronomy and in pure mathematics.

Although the Department of Mathematics and Astronomy does not form the basis for any independent curriculum, the number of students taking its courses and the size of its staff are greater than most of the other curricula. The courses range over the whole field of undergraduate and graduate mathematics, from solid geometry and trigonometry to such graduate courses as the number theory and projective geometry. The course in astronomy, in addition to the pure mathematics required, includes practical observation in Sayre Observatory.

For many years the Department of Mathematics has maintained a high standard in its insistence upon mastery by the student of the subject taught. It is the endeavor of the department to continue these sound traditions and at the same time to make the subject as alive and practical as possible.

The Department of English

ACCEPTING the summary report of the Carnegie foundation which concluded that, "incompetence in English is responsible each year for more failures among engineers than inaccurate mathematical calculations," the English Department, when it reorganized in September, 1925, set itself primarily to teaching engineers how to use the English language. This reorganization was accomplished under Dr. Robert M. Smith, who succeeded Dr. W. C. Thayer as head of the department, when the latter retired after thirty years of continuous service.

With its new and aggressive policy, the department was not long in attracting attention. Men who thought their general knowledge of their native tongue would easily procure the three credits of the English courses were rudely and unceremoniously awakened. Failures among these men mounted as high as thirty-three per cent. When asked the reason, one professor tersely answered: "We are just asking them to put periods at the ends of simple declarative sentences."

Once reorganized, the English Department made its first aim the teaching of "effective written and oral English." It recognized no difference between "Engineering English" or "Business English" and good English. It assumed that the student who could not prepare an essay about Shakespeare, using good sentence structure, could not successfully present either a business or a technical paper. The courses were changed to meet the needs evident at Lehigh and likewise to provide the general foundation which has become as essential to the enterprising engineer as to the professionally inclined Arts graduate.

A definite plan for the freshmen provided that they should be grouped by a preliminary examination at the beginning of the year and that work, then, should be prescribed for each group according to the needs of that group.

The engineering faculties co-operated with the plans of the English Department by allowing students either to elect English in their sophomore year, or to return during the junior or senior year for a drill in technical writing. Having secured the fundamentals during their first year, these men are instructed as upperclassmen in the particular needs of business correspondence or the preparation of scientific reports.

This year the department made an interesting experiment by substituting, for the usual history of English literature course in the sophomore year, a type course in world drama. The main purpose is: first, to awaken the interest of the sophomores, and then, to establish habits of intelligent reading. The discussion and comment aroused by the course in Contemporary Drama last spring bids fair to be repeated on a larger scale with the sophomores. The department is striving to make the course sound by constant use of the standard examples of classical and Elizabethan drama. After the wide orientation such a course provides, the students are ready for the advanced courses in literature.

In its reorganization, the English Department placed less stress upon philology and more upon literature likely to engage the interest of Lehigh men.

The Department of Geology

THE physical history of the past, its growth and its stages, have been indelibly written into the crust of the earth's surface. The main part of the science of geology deals with the digging to get this history, coupled with emphasis on the nature and the economic value of the minerals on the earth's surface.

Geologic time is measured in millions of years and the process of evolution of the earth and the life upon it began some 500,000,000 years ago. The first job of the geologist, then, is to study his science historically, to get the records of the past that are stamped on the rocks, and whose story is called geologic history.

The study of the science at Lehigh deals not only with the history of evolution, but also with the nature and the economic value of the natural resources present in the crust of the earth. All geologic deposits, having commercial value, are studied with regard to formation, geologic history, constituency and methods of mining. Another phase of geology, physiography, describes the effect of climate and physical conditions on the development of countries. To fit men for the actual problems that confront the geologist, a practical course concerning geological methods is offered which illustrates the modern means of mining and gives particular training in the growing field of geology.

To give the men as much practical training as possible, field expeditions are regularly conducted to nearby mines and quarries where geological formations are studied and then to the mills where they can observe the manufacturing processes. The region around Bethlehem is rich in both mines and mills and thus the location makes it doubly valuable for the development of a strong department.

The Department of Physical Education

A COLLEGE training includes something more than acquired knowledge; it embodies a complete training for the man about to begin his career. In securing this training, no essential element should be neglected. There is a tendency among college students to place too much emphasis on the scholastic program and place too little attention to their physical well-being. It is here that the Department of Physical Education enters in as an important factor in the University, for through its efforts this condition is avoided. The function of the department is to insure that each student takes the proper care of his health by gaining the necessary exercise so that he finishes college physically fit to begin his life work.

The best means by which this is accomplished is through intramural and inter-collegiate sports. By participating, the student develops in a social way, inasmuch as he learns the art of working with others for a common goal and, still more important, the value of good sportsmanship. Similarly does he develop mentally, for never is the demand for cool reasoning and sound judgment as urgent as in the heat of an athletic contest. Fundamentally, the man in engaging in sports is bettering himself physically, not only by improving his physique, but also through providing the necessary recreation. Finally, the business world of today is searching for men who possess leadership and nowhere is this requisite developed to such an extent as in athletics.

The Department of Military Science and Tactics

“TO BE prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace. A free people ought not only to be well armed, but disciplined, to which end a uniform and a well-digested plan is requisite.” (George Washington—in his speech to Congress, Jan. 8, 1790.) Such is the spirit of the R. O. T. C. and such is the spirit in which the job of training is conceived at Lehigh.

Throughout the colleges of this country comes the controversy of military training or not, compulsory or optional. The questions have been answered in various ways, but here at the base of old South Mountain compulsory training has found favor, not with dissatisfaction and grumbling, but with a cheerfulness that bespeaks much.

Two units are maintained, one in infantry and the other in ordnance, with a total enrollment of 800 men. Last year Lehigh was fortunate in having the War Department award them the “distinguished college” rating, and when it is considered that out of all the colleges and universities of this country only thirty-three awards were made, we can be proud of our corps and prouder still of our college. The percentage of rating awarded was the highest ever given to the University and this reflects much credit upon both the Army staff and the student corps.

SENIORS

JOHN SIMPSON FORD
President

History

WHEN the class of 1927 assembled for the first time on that memorable September day in 1923, few of us realized that we were to be the first class which the new administration of the University was to produce in its entirety. The preceding classes have been under that regime for one, two, and three years, but only 1927 can boast of having known the four years of changing history which South Mountain has just witnessed. We have been privileged to help in the birth of a new and greater Lehigh which promises to grow into the greatest engineering university of the modern world—a university of which every past and future son may well be proud.

One year before our matriculation, President Richards instituted the Renaissance of Lehigh. It is to his far-seeing judgment that we owe many of the succeeding improvements in the affairs and standing of the University. It is to the vision of a "classmate" of ours—Dean McConn—that we owe the increased efficiency in the administration of student affairs, and the raising of the scholastic standards to the point where Lehigh ranks among the best in the country. We shall leave South Mountain with a firm resolve to make the dream of these men for a greater Lehigh come true. For we shall leave as Lehigh men with each of us holding deep in his heart the loyalty which only a real breeder of men may claim. And we shall continue to hold that loyalty through the years.

Of the details of our history as a class, there is much that may be said. We have very many cherished memories. Who of the class of 1927 does not recall the thrill of pride at the winning of the Founder's Day sports in our freshman year? Who does not enjoy looking back on the bitter battles and the joyous feasts of our underclass banquets? Who can forget our attempt to revive the traditional Calculus Crenation? And one might mention a thousand more things that will go down in history and be carried in all our memories of undergraduate days. We have missed only one thrill that a Lehigh class might know—the satisfaction of a football victory over Lafayette.

We have witnessed the revivification of the beauty of the campus, and we have seen the completed Alumni Memorial Building. We have watched the renovation of Christmas-Saucon Hall, and we have mentally visioned the Packard Lab.

In conclusion, as we leave college and go out into the world with the intention of blazing the name of Lehigh even farther across the sky, we can look back upon these last four years and say that they were good. The class of 1927 will not pass away with graduation. Rather we will be bound through the friendships made in our undergraduate days in a common interest in working for our Alma Mater and in bringing "added lustre" to the name of Lehigh.

BORN at a very early age, "Ed" was kept from being a great pianist by the mere fact that he didn't know how to play the piano. But after years of practice at potato mashing, he finally mastered the art of mashing the bass drum. After loafing two years in the fashionable country club known as Princeton University, he decided he wanted to do some work, so he came to Lehigh, where his wishes were even more than fulfilled. Here he has beat his way into the land bass-drumming, and almost any afternoon if we do not find him under his puddle-jumping Lex, we can hear the melodious strains of his bass drum as he is trying out some new selection. It is almost miraculous the wonderful tone and clearness of the notes which he produces. Rumors have it that he is going to give a solo recital at some time in the near future, and it is almost definite that he has received several offers to go in the movies. The swinging motion might possibly come in very handy to "Ed" in later years, either for beating carpets, spanking babies, or making little ones out of big ones.

SINCE we are positive that "Ben's" life story will be better written in Who's Who for 1928, we were tempted at first to ask the arid public to wait a while. But the public clamors and it is necessary to make some comment. "Ben" is the original hard-headed business man. He had no sooner snagged his high school diploma, than he spent four years reorganizing the hard coal business. After this stupendous task was accomplished, to broaden his field he came to Lehigh.

Realizing the honor bestowed upon the University, it declared a holiday when he registered. "Ben" was big-hearted, so he condescended to run around with the common herd. Then some one discovered his business ability. Everybody who had a job they did not want passed it on to our hero.

He almost raised a mustache, and he did accumulate dignity. But we suppose he must go back and reorganize the coal business again.

ON September 27, 1904, in a small town of Lisbon in the eastern part of Ohio, "Bill" let out his first yell and has been yelling ever since. He attended Lisbon High School, after which he entered Mount Union College, Alliance, Ohio. Because of his engineering frame of mind, Mount Union could just keep him for a year. He entered Lehigh as a sophomore in 1924. While at Mount, besides playing football and being an "A" student, "Bill" met a co-ed which accounts for his semi-weekly trips to Youngstown, Ohio, while at home on vacations, and his nightly letter-writing when at school. He is quite a regular attendant at the Nativity dances where he has met quite a number of girls who furnish the dates for him while at school. Laying all joking aside, "Bill" is quite a worker at school, doing various jobs, and at the same time is a good student and great things are expected of him in the future.

Nevertheless, with "Joe's" personality and line he managed to make a remarkably good scholastic record. But "Joe" has not tailed in the field of sport either. As a cross country and track man, Lehigh had a hard-working addition to the team and in that field of endeavor "Joe" won the coveted "L." He sure can step.

"Joe's" Ford "can" could always be seen dashing across the bridge or parked in front of a house on any old night and he isn't so slow either. "Joe" has that irresistible charm that the fair sex couldn't forget.

Popular on the campus, always ready to go out, ready to study, and a likeableness that we seldom meet, "Joe" is bound to be a success. He expects to be one of the master financiers of the country one of these days and we don't doubt but that he will. Best of luck, "Joe."

FOR a year after his entrance into Lehigh in the fall of 1923, little was seen or heard of "Aspy." Next year, however, he started to blossom out. Armed with the nickname "Firpo," bestowed for various reasons, and with his winning smile, he sallied forth into society, and great were his conquests among the ladies, to whom a tall, dark and handsome young man proved decidedly attractive.

But in his junior year the serious side of life dawned upon him. Renouncing the frivolities of wine, women and song, "Aspy" turned all of his energies toward his books, became a serious student and burned prodigious quantities of good electricity. Yet he found time to indulge in a little wrestling, for the sake of his body and for the good of his soul.

In his last year he again saw the light, and mixed judiciously his work and his dates, having tasted of both and found both good. Now as a finished Lehigh product he is leaving college, laden with memories of the past, and knowledge for the future.

RALPH joined the U. D. C. (United Deacons of the Confederacy) on October 24, 1905. All his "learnin'" was obtained at the old home-town high school, graduating in 1922. In order to get a running start, he gave Roanoke College a treat for the year 1922-23, and coming to his rest at his alma mater in 1923.

Work? "That's the fondest thing he is of," it seems. Along with this came scholarships at Roanoke College and for the four years here. And studies aren't all—three years of interest in the Glee Club—sing!—oi, yoi, yoi!

Ralph was active as Senior Y. M. C. A. Cabinet member, putting out plenty of energy on the handbook and frosh reception. As a sideline he helped to furnish the weather for Bethlehem the past two years, as he is one of 'em that makes the observations in our weather bureau.

It must be said that he's a hound for "sessions"—can scent 'em for miles around and hasn't been marked absent once!

THERE is nothing peculiar about "Chuck" except in the way he pronounces his name, which, gentle reader, is another way of saying that he is a regular fellow.

Not being fond of beans as a steady diet, he early shunned Boston's nearby institutions of learning, and came to Lehigh to be an engineer. Having learned to gracefully wear a flannel shirt and smoke a corncob pipe, "Chuck" has made a huge success of his chosen work, and we predict big things ahead of him.

His conscientious efforts in journalism netted him the managing editor post of the Brown and White, which he has filled in creditable fashion, but we feel, confidentially, that his next managership will be more in the line of domestic affairs.

One year at Wilkins convinced John that Lehigh was the place, so here he came to live and learn.

To outsiders he may have seemed to be just another one of those easy-going, self-possessed fellows; but to his intimates and large circle of friends he was revealed as a warm-hearted, hard-working, cheerful and sincere fellow—the kind of a fellow of whom it is said in after life by his classmates, "Remember John Barr? FROM down in the woods by the Potomac came "Deac," spreading the news about Hagerstown to such an extent that even now some few of us know that there is such a place. Just as unsophisticated a little lad as you might find, but he soon caught on to things and entered wholeheartedly into the spirit of "Mealey's" and the "Collie," as well as extending his social endeavors toward our own local "mamas." And who ever saw a college dance without "Deac" being there spreading his own "courtin' chatter"?

Old man "Knowledge" has frowned on him a bit, but we aren't quite certain as to just what type of course he was following this summer. Anyway a secret is a secret and you'll never know.

"Deac" has been exceptionally popular and well liked at Lehigh and his pleasing personality has won him a multitude of friends and undoubtedly will carry him along to a successful and prosperous future. The gang sure will miss you, "Deac."

NOT a long time ago Carl became one of the things commonly known to intelligent people as "Frosh" and with four hundred others became one of the future finds of America. Ever since "Bit" has been doing only original work—always a new method to proceed, always a new girl, in fact, every day a new Carl far more sagacious than the Bittrich of the previous day.

Truly Carl has attempted great things. To throw Jack Wilson was our hero's ambition. Each time "Bit" succeeded in getting "Pop" to the mat, but always our hero not only had his hopes dashed in vain, but also himself smashed in vain. Carl did prove himself to be a capable wrestler and a man whom only "Jimmy" Reed would conquer.

As a lecturer he has doped out some new ideas of his own. "An illustration on the screen is worth two in the book," is his motto, and he accordingly shows plenty of illustrations for every one's amusement.

If you overcome as many hard views of life as you've shown on the screen in seminar, your success is assured, Carl.

FOUR years ago, dearest, blue-eyed "Ralphy" untied his mother's apron strings from 'round his neck and came from the potter's town to the crags of old South Mountain. Spurning Bethlehem's thirst-quenching beer and warm, weak and willing women, he concerned himself with the books and a voluminous correspondence with the only one back home.

Who said that gentlemen don't prefer blondes? Our "Ralphy" is one of the few mortals or immortals who has been steadfast and true to one and only one of the daughters of fair Eve.

Ralph came here, strange to say, with ideals. Although somewhat disillusioned by association with his fellow students and scarred in the battle, he never succumbed to the temptation of fire-water, etc., and has lived up to them.

Being rather quiet and reserved, he does not make friends easily, but once his friend, you remain so always. He is the embodiment of perseverance and squareness. These have left their mark and will carry him far in his chosen profession.

WHEN "Kelly" came to Lehigh he had the jump on most of his brother freshmen as he had a brother who graduated in '22 and put him wise to all the charms of Bethlehem. As a consequence, "Kelly" knew what the inside of the "Grand" and the "Collie" looked like before the first week was up, and it wasn't long before he was acquainted with Professor Mealey's hangout. When his brother "Bill" left Lehigh he took along with his diploma the name of "Two-Beer Bowler," but Kelly, went him one better in everything, and has now earned for himself the name of "Three Beer Bowler."

In his freshman year "Kelly" set out to show the world what an Abington High School man could do and was rewarded in his junior year by being elected into Tau Beta Pi and also made his varsity "L" in track. This year he has distinguished himself more than ever. When his brother M. During the past four years, while in an effort to determine the major axis of a given crystal, our metallurgist has also been a laudable citizen of Lehigh. He has seen four years of service on the track team, and is a charter member of the Spiked Shoe Club. He also has plunked some mean notes for the Mandolin Club.

Like other of the college's more fortunate, "Flivver" was a free lance until last year's spring house parties, when the pin went on a journey.

THERE are more people in "Who's Who" from Swarthmore than any town in the United States. That's the handicap "Freddy" had to start out this world with, he being from Swarthmore. So he came to Lehigh. He surely knew what he was here for because subjects just wilted before him. But that's far from all, as "Freddy" is mighty clever, too. The band, observing this, beat the army to his services and so he shouldered a saxophone instead of a gun. At the same time his feet found him a place in the Mustard and Cheese show, where he is a permanent fixture. Having presented chemical papers before the A. C. S. at the Sesqui-Centennial while still a student, we expect lots from him because he knows his "oil." His "profs" have tried to find fault with him, but finally gave up with disgust, as he was irreproachable. She thinks so, too, and you can't blame her for that. Best of luck, "Freddy," we're all rooting for you!

HAIL the college, here comes William Challis Britton! Upon entering Lehigh, his sole ambition was to become an electrical engineer, but since that time he has changed his aspirations and has decided to devote all his time to the entertainment of the fair sex in a small town twelve miles down the river where our rival Lafayette holds forth. In his first year at Lehigh, he found nothing of interest, but during his sophomore and junior years, Challis sallied forth and behold—a sheik. The following year in a gallant attempt to hold this title, he raised a mustache, but to his dismay it did not appeal to the fair sex of this community, nor, from all appearances, to those in his home town of Scranton either. In college he has acquired more or less skill in what is commonly called handing a girl a line, but outside of this decided tendency toward the fair sex, he has a likeable disposition and is noted among his classmates for his jovial expressions. These qualities, together with his perseverance, are certain to lead to success in later life.

"BBROADIE" has a complexity complex. His interests are many and cover a very divergent field. Aside from his dabbling in athletics, he can as an interested spectator tell you why this and that player on the Nazareth team should be holding forth with the Athletics. "Das" is also a musician—at least he keeps a trumpet in his room and occasionally sounds are emitted therefrom.

"Broadie" gets remarkable results in the classroom without undue effort. He is just what a "course crabber" is not. He must have his weekly "affaire d'amour." Then, of course, there is his inherent capacity to be satisfied.

Good nature is written all over "Das." He has to stand the butt of much intended humor, perhaps because of a little word "yet" or for his once "making the door shut," but he always comes off unscathed because of the Societte method. "Broadie" is one example of a house divided against itself that doesn't fall or waste away.

THE versatile young chap pictured above, bears up well under the many honors his ability has won for him. In dramatic and journalistic work "Brody's" success has been marked, for in his freshman year his talents in both these fields were discovered and have since been exploited.

Gifted with a capability for portraying difficult roles in the annual Mustard and Cheese productions, "Irv" has been no small reason for the success of Coll-Egypt, etc. The praise accorded to the diminutive "heroine" was well merited. In his Brown and White work, "Irv" further demonstrated his manner of expression. His natural desire to interest himself in up-to-date news gave him the means of reporting events in his own style which readers always recognized.

But our hero's most striking means of self-expression is the winning smile which dawns on his face at frequent intervals. "Irv" has not forgotten the saying that a smile will go a long way, and herein lies the reason for his potential success.

"BROOKS" started his venture in the realms of higher education at Franklin and Marshall College in 1922. The time-honored custom of "tipping hats" to the professors didn't quite coincide with the democratic principles of our young "John Shartle," so the year 1924 found him immigrating to Lehigh University.

John did a "bang-up" job in his studies while here, and a valentine from the dean was a very unusual occurrence. Ask L. L. L. Bethlehem's fair sex held no interest for our John. He could glance over the "fairest of the fair" and his only remark would be, "Those things don't interest me." (Believe that and I'll tell you another.)

During his three years at Lehigh, John made many friends, and after graduation he will be remembered for his striking personality and loyalty to a friend. We expect big things of him in the business world and we do not doubt that the world will know a good bit about him in technical work in the near future.

THE year 1904 was famous as a result of the Russo-Japanese War, and the St. Louis Exposition, but its chief claim to distinction is that, within its limits, J. R. Brooks first looked at the blue sky and green earth. But "Joe" was dissatisfied with the cold North, so he first wandered to the plains of Texas, and then to the land of eternal youth, from whence he came to Lehigh.

Although Richard entered the portals of Asa Packer's edifice with the greenest look possible, he soon dissipated all doubts as to his ability and won a place of recognition. With the cold logic gathered from his various experiences, and his southern suavity, "Joe" could enthral himself in the breasts of six out of any half dozen beauties in the country.

But in all seriousness, "Joe's" time at Lehigh has been far from wasted. On the eve of graduation, he has abstracted all knowledge of finance, physiography, accounting and law. So in years to come, this unique gentleman will be heralded far and wide as Florida's most prominent realtor and banker.

All those who have "buddied" around with him soon realized his conscientious attitude toward his work, pleasure and friends alike. He came through in good "form," figuratively, because of his profitable four years of chemical engineering, and literally because he has a physique and strength that has served him well in wrestling and otherwise. He was a representative of the 145-lb. class on the freshman team and afterward continued interest in that activity. Musically inclined, he became affiliated with the University Glee Club. If, of late, he was in a particular hurry, you may know that the weather bureau of which he had half charge, was about to receive attention. WHEN Carlton first entered the portals on old South Mountain, he had all the earmarks of being an honest-to-goodness course-crabber. However, as time went on, it was revealed that a good deal of his time was occupied in keeping ledgers, reading well-known books, and keeping a very regular correspondence with certain of the weaker sex.

His last trip from Washington proved a memorable one. He became quite engrossed with the young lady who shared the seat with him. Later on he received an alarm clock from the same party. The boys all wonder if she sent it to wake him up. He is also a firm believer in good teeth, therefore spending much time in a certain dentist's office.

Carlton is a fellow who makes very little noise, accomplishes much, holds his friends, and invariably uses a great deal of common sense in all that he endeavors to do.

With such a background his friends are eager to wish him the best of luck in all future undertakings.

BORN at an early age in Washington, D. C., "Rudy" soon overcame this disadvantage by exhibiting genius as a mechanical engineer in so far as the skilled handling of house furnaces can bring that out. His days in the district closed with a popular career at "Tech" High School.

In his early days, he was a keen observer and philosopher. Of his observations, woman was the object, and in his philosophy the brilliant future of the dusky race ever gleamed. An intense desire for knowledge made him enter Lehigh. This desire he is still attempting to realize—between dates with the fair ones of Bethlehem.

The combination of a pleasant personality from the Southland and the "savoir fair" obtained at Lehigh have made him popular socially.

To those who know him best he will always be four-square and unafraid to say what he thinks regardless of the consequences. May life temper sterling quality with diplomacy and give him of her best.

Yes, sir, when "Pete" "lights up" with that tobacco furnace of his, you can be sure he has something subtle to add to the conversation. Though "Pete" is beyond the shallowness of dance hall "chippies" and abstains therefrom (whenever possible, yet, the so-called frivolities of college life just suit him and he misses none. Gate crashing is his specialty and at this he has become quite adept, taking great delight in using that long brain of his to outwit some pompous doorkeeper. However, he must fear detection, for each spring "Pete" may be seen among the decorators of the cinder track; and from the speed he makes, he must expect each doorkeeper to be a Paddock in disguise. "Pete" has his ideas about life in this cruel world just as distinctly outlined as he has about college life and we all know that he is sure of success—and lots of it.

AS THIS young man from Baltimore strolled the Lehigh campus, one could see the making of a famous person. His powerful voice and his rustic appearance expressed his natural talent as a circus announcer or an instructor of the "Black Bottom." Frank is also a practical engineer with a large capacity of ideas to establish in his field. Although worries seem to escape his personality, he is somewhat in doubt as to whether he has chosen the right profession or not.

Frank entered the curriculum of civil engineering with advanced standing from Baltimore Polytechnic Institute. His convincing arguments and determined efforts carried him through the hazards of "Calculus," the gauntlet of "Annie Mac" and the final rounds of Professor Fogg's civil courses. As long as his name remains upon the chapel tablet, his old friends will be hoping for his continuous success as a civil engineer.

A VERY quiet, shy lad when he arrived, no one had any special idea that he would do anything startling. Look at the list above and see how wrong we were. All through his frosh year he seemed the meekest lad imaginable, but when the restraints were removed he became one of the best known and best liked men in the class. A rare good nature and sense of humor stood him in good stead through his four years. Even Tau Beta Pi and various other activities seemed unable to affect that habitual smile which has endeared him to all of us.

He has always retained his frosh reticence on the subject of girls, but somehow, he manages to walk into every dance or house-party with some real "foreign talent" that makes the rest of us wonder how he does it. Good fellow, clean sport, a worker—that's "Dick." Good luck, "Smoky."

RENAN was sent to us all the way from Mexico, all the way from South Mexico where summer lasts 364 days and winter is one day long. He has made us think much more of his country than all the books and papers we have read.

Any country would be proud to call him her son after his accomplishments in Lehigh. He worked conscientiously and played heartily. He was born to be a lawyer rather than an engineer: he would spend hours trying to prove to us that red was black.

Leaving Lehigh, he admits he carries one lone disillusion: that Lafayette football jinx! He stayed here five years to see it broken, and we wouldn't be surprised if he takes some more "P. G.'s" until his dream comes true.

Adapting himself to our American conditions was an easy task; he understood us and we understood him. But he had that red Spanish blood in him and naturally he liked "them"; we mean the ladies, and blushed if anybody asked him whether he had been tamed by some American Senorita. He will make a good engineer.

WAS, way back in 1905 or 6, a poor, unfortunate sister out in Illinois was reluctantly wheeling a small, blonde, blue-eyed baby brother along a boulevard. As luck would have it, the firemen were having a parade that day. This bouncing infant, who was none other than "Jock," was very much unconcerned until a band came along. Noise always attracts a childish fancy. He looked up and around and beheld many blue trousers and red shirts. Then and there he set his mind on one thing: a uniform.

Years later, when "Jock" had decided to go to Lehigh to become an engineer, it happened that one day early in September, 1922, a train rolled into town carrying along with many other unsophisticates, our "Jock." Soon after his arrival he discovered that he was to be in the army. Reacting entirely different from other freshmen, "Jock" saw the materialization of a lifelong ambition—a uniform. Luckily he did not confine his activities to the army. He went out for athletics and made himself useful wherever he could. Good luck and God bless you, "Jock."

EARLY one morning in September the Central Railroad dropped at Bethlehem a man named Leon J. Chiodo. It was afterward known that this young fellow came from the town of Dunmore, situated on the outskirts of Scranton. His purpose in Bethlehem was to attend Lehigh University. And it was here that we afterward became accustomed to call him by his nicknames, "Chick" and "Leon-J."

When in a serious mood, "Chick" is a man of few words, but when in his humorous mood he sure can reel off some hot ones. One of our favorite pastimes is getting "Chick" to talk about women. At our "bull sessions" he sure holds the floor and nobody dare talk against the women when they are the topic of conversation.

We all take great pleasure in listening to "Chick" recite poetry. Yes, he sure does like his poetry and you ought to hear the poem he wrote about that girl in Dunmore.

One of "Chick's" greatest hobbies is a pipeful of good smoking tobacco. And, by the way, he takes great pleasure in playing his mandolin.

"Charlie" has never been known to pass up a good time. Needless to say he has caused many feminine hearts to flutter since his auspicious entrance to Lehigh.

When the University Band steps out on the athletic field you will always find class there as well as Class. He toots a mean "sax" and we don't mean perhaps. His variety of "sax" appeal is qualified somewhat by the fact that he parts his hair in the middle and receives frequent letters from Beaver College.

"Mark" is a royal good fellow and thinks no more of a nickel than his right eye, but nevertheless we wouldn't know what to do without him. His spirit of co-operation and unflinching good nature have made many friends during his four years here.

FROM the quiet and serenity of Lewistown, "Cactus" emerged in 1923 to begin the preliminary study of medicine. We will divulge his secret ambition right here and now—"Milt" wants to be a love doctor, prescribing for the ills of those stricken by this "ma-lady." It has therefore been necessary for "Cactus" to engage in a non-recognized extra curricula activity, a sort of a laboratory course for which he receives no points but lots of credit because of the way he has handled it. Imagine being so well thought of as to be asked to invite five "blind" dates down for a house-party.

"Milt" has always striven in the best Horatio Alger manner to overcome the highest obstacles, especially in the way of studies and indifferent feminine hearts and—as Dame Fortune would have it, he has always come out at the happy end.

Notwithstanding these troubles, "Cac" has managed to engage in many extra-curricula activities, both social and athletic, and to experiment with the animals in "Bill" Hall.

LADIES and gentlemen, we have here represented the one and only animal of its kind extant in the Lehigh wilds. It measures five feet nine inches from head to foot and five feet nine inches back again, making a total length of eleven feet eight inches.

"Clint" came to Lehigh when he was still quite young and has never recovered from it. He is English and is still laughing at the jokes told him during his cradle days. "Clint" was a student of the first origin—he spent three summers at Lehigh and he says that those summer-school sessions in Bethlehem and elsewhere sure were educating. He spent the first year getting acquainted with the boys; he passed the second year learning the ropes of the town and university; he was a "good guy" during his third year; and as a senior we thank God he isn't dignified.

WHEN asked from whom did the Concilios spring, he answered, "We sprung from nobody—we always sprung at them"—and then he decided he'd make that team. So with a spring, he sprang from Spring Street, Newton, N. J., and landed in the center of things in the Lehigh "Walley's" most representative football team. Maybe the original Vito was full of "wim," "wigor" and "witality." This model is full of chips of wrought iron (one comes off his proboscis during each game), ribs of wine casks, and with a Mussolini fund of vitality. His grandest fault lies in the fact that he can't comprehend defeat. Just how he passes scholastically is as plain as his passing the ball on the gridiron—he aims and passes. And when it comes to women: He passes them, too, as quietly as a Hotel Bethlehem elevator. When he does hesitate, they leave him either up—way up, or down, but some day one'll come along he won't pass. Until then "Vit," we'll remember your motto of 1926, "They shall not pass the center of the line—and that's that."

"CONNIE," as he is better known, has spent the last four years of his life in this hall of learning; but this does not half tell the story because the greater part of his time and activities deal with the town and Lehigh customs, although we must add that he always gets his work done quickly and easily. From this we see that "Connie" is likable, quick thinking, and easy to make friends with. His one drawback—and this can scarcely be called such—is his failure to worry. But after all there seems to be no reason why he should worry because everything that he goes into he makes a success of. It will not be long before we all will be saying that we were classmates of "that man," because undoubtedly "Connie" is one we are going to hear much about and his success seems sure.

It's rather a hard assignment to say anything about "Bill," because he says so little himself. He's the original "man of few words," we'd say.

One thing must be mentioned, however, and that is that we can't think of one single person who dislikes "Bill." To go through four years of college life and make nothing but friends, is more than an achievement in itself.

During the past few years he seems to have taken an unusual fancy to the fair sex of Baltimore and Allentown, much to the disappointment of some "she-males" who know him and are decidedly anxious to become better acquainted with him by means of the "See you at 8.30" method.

Besides being active in various school societies, "Bill" was a member of the local Masonic lodge, and during his senior year held a commission as captain in the college R. O. T. C. unit.

In closing, it is only fair to give Bethlehem the honor due her by disclosing the fact that "our hero" is a local product, being born, bred and "brung up" in the famous valley after which our Alma Mater was named.

"BILL" came to earth one wintry day in January—the month of snowballs and galoshes. After the trials and tribulations of the lower steps of education, which he finally conquered, he ultimately decided that no education would be complete without a beautiful and inspiring environment. No more appropriate surroundings could be secured, in his estimation, than that of the so-called "Levi Alley," so he wisely chose Lehigh as the best place to win the "skin you love to touch," namely, that of the wooly mutton. "No, Esther, his father was not a butcher, even if 'Bill' did dress to kill.") When the dean informed "Bill" that "wine, women and song" were detrimental to his welfare, he wisely gave up singing. This alone proves that he deserves the hide of the "lambkin," for he is unquestionably a student of nature, figuratively speaking. Sometimes "Bill" is a running mate for a heifer, but he is an all-round good chap and we all wish him a most hearty and successful career.

"DON" hails from the politicians' paradise, though he never boasts about it. In fact, the only thing about Washington of which he seems the least bit proud is the military training acquired in high school.

And well he might, for his record in Lehigh's R. O. T. C. unit is exceptional. During his senior year he held a commission as second lieutenant of Reserves. Incidentally, "Don" holds the title of "Camp Meade's Best After-Taps Story Teller."

It is rumored that Washington provided Cottrell with one other interest, but she has been so far away that he has found it safe to yield, occasionally—oh, so very rarely!—to these Bethlehem women.

"Don" is too quiet to become widely known, yet among those with whom he has lived, he has won admiring and loyal friends. As a chemical engineer his future is promising, provided he isn't killed by some of his tool experiments.

ENTHUSIASTIC from the start the "sargeant" lost the freshman relay, and he solemnly vowed to some day break a record. Jack almost broke his neck to be the first to reach the tape, but emerged Middle Atlantic States half-mile champion after two years of fast "stepping."

Scholastics have contributed somewhat to "Jack's" education, but he has majored in outside activities. Although a miner by text, he aspires to become an entrepreneur, upon discovery of the latent business vein which outcropped unexpectedly at the apex of his extra-curricula claims. "Jack" has become pleasantly metamorphosed by his deep interest in all college affairs; he extended himself to the utmost in the behalf of his first big business proposition—publication of the 1927 EPIHOME.

Mighty oaks from acorns grow, and now "Jack" stands with limbs extended groping for a prominent position in life's future.

ANYBODY sick or temporarily disabled?—then see Croxton. The same relation Dr. Bull bears to this institution, Croxton bears to the section, and although some of the remedies are quite original, we would just as soon patronize Croxton as the University official.

Besides being general practitioner and trainer and manager of all the section teams, our honorable John wields a mean tennis racket and not only in a tennis game, as some of the frosh can attest.

This is not the final step of all his activities, for although many trips to the Camel's Hump are of real intrinsic value, we are permitted to say that they have added more to John's education than anything Dr. Carothers has ever whispered in his ear.

Like any other human John is fond of all that is worth while. A recent Thanksgiving vacation has just indicated to us that there are "some ladies" who might easily be considered worth while—but over and above this we see his fondness turn ever and anon to an innumerable variety of cravats.

BIG, bad, "Bill," who goes home to Kingston, Pa., for Christmas vacations, and either west or to some heathen land in the summer, spent the first year of an exhaustive pursuit of higher education at Dartmouth, but realizing his mistake he took a big ski jump and lit in the Lehigh Valley at old Asa Packer's little college. Ever since the date of his arrival he has proved himself to be "one of the boys." And in the long winter evenings in after years when the boys of '27 see, in a cloud of smoke from the old pipe, or dancing in the flames above the logs, the old, reckless, carefree college days, they will remember big "Bill" Crane and how it took fifteen freshmen to get him down in the freshman-sophomore battles.

"Bill" is the typical kind of college man you read about. He is quite a ladies' man, football hero, and boxing champion; he has a peculiar sense of humor and a contagious laugh that you enjoy almost as much as he does. Here, Lehigh has turned out a real man.

Though quiet and unassuming, there are few in college who don't know him. He is a real "plugger," as exemplified by his work on the football field.

"Herb" already has the jump on some of his "Phi Bete" classmates, for during one of the aforementioned five years he was a "sure enough" professor at the I. C. S. in Scranton. At least he said he was. Small wonder then that the government is ever watchful for those employing the mails to defraud.

Being a gentleman, he does not particularly care for brunettes, earthquakes, flat tires or measles. Any evening he can be found studying—it is some evening—probably indicative of a snowstorm in Hades. However, in spite of his coal cracking proclivities, we know that he is bound to succeed and wish him a full measure of success.

However, after four years of college, he is, according to the most optimistic reports, gradually emerging from the fog. His faults are few indeed; in fact, if we disregard his great passion for sleep, he seems to have no faults at all. "Sly" has that very desirable faculty of being able to make friends wherever he goes, and, although he is of a studious nature, he is always ready for a good time.

His eagerness to go home for vacation and his far-away look afterward, not to mention the fact that he is a champion letter writer, makes us suspect that his interests are not entirely centered around Bethlehem.

After "Sly" has left us, we will still remember the wonderful impression he left around here, even on "Skipper's" steps.

However, his soaring tones are typical of his scholastic position, for he has maintained high standing in spite of having acquired a true college education. And besides all this, "Dick" has in him the makings of a great infantry general—ask any man in his company.

"Dick" does not indulge in wine, but in his song he makes up for the other two. And in spite of the unheard of fact that DeGray neither smokes, drinks, chews nor swears, he has shown an ability in leadership that should take him far in this world.

Although this was a serious handicap to overcome, "Jack" has managed to live it down and has turned out to be a big figure (?) on the campus. In spite of his fiery temper, he has gained for himself a good many friends on and off the campus. He is especially noted for his hearty and contagious laugh.

It seems that "D" has a great desire to meet a nice girl in Bethlehem, but as yet he has not met with success in this venture.

From that time on we have seen his smiling countenance much in demand, especially among the women. His conquests in this line have lead him near and far, and ere long we shall find compared to the world's greatest lovers—Bernard McFadden and others.

His student activities have been many. The band couldn't do without him, and as treasurer of the M. E. Society we find him unsurpassed. To keep in training he took up wrestling and lacrosse, and in this way has been able to keep that manly figure the girls admire so much.

Friends are the easiest thing "Bill" makes, and after that he made his letter on the soccer field. Next he visited every beer emporium we know of, and almost started a few of his own. "Bill" is of local color, but we don't hold that against him as long as we see so many pins wobbling along the city byways. There's better things in this town than looks, and "Bill" is one of them. "Bill" doesn't wear one of those square, flat charms with script on, but he sure does get there, for it takes a good man to graduate from a third college in four years, and a good man is hard to find. He has one of those suave personalities that knock's 'em a little cookoo from the start, and then keeps 'em that way till the finish. A few years from now, when he has the writer on the witness stand, we hope he loses breath, for if he doesn't, we're a goner.

He entered Lehigh three years ago determined to be an M. E. However, he soon realized the folly of his ways and joined the ranks of the "civils."

Determined not to be the mere technician his course would make of him, "Bill" diligently conned all of the best literature. As a result of this he gained for himself a masterly control of the English language. In addition to winning him a place on the Brown and White, this attributed him with the poise and bearing which characterizes a well-read man.

Membership in Tau Beta Pi is sufficient evidence that he is an expert technologist. The combination of these two elements produce in him all the traits of the cultured man.

"MORT," A CLEFT Mortimer by his mother, but whose name is cut short by the present craze for economy by Coolidge, entered Lehigh one bright day in the fall of 1923. After spending a term in the College of Arts and Sciences, he saw that the business department was still floundering around in its infancy, so decided to help build it up by becoming one of them. Since then the department has grown by leaps and bounds until it has reached the stage of being recognized as one of the best in the country.

To show how considerate he is, "Mort" found out that the college ordered just enough sheepskins for the class of 1927, and not wanting an extra sheep killed, decided to graduate in June. The S. P. C. A. is debating the matter of offering him a medal.

But all kidding aside, those who are well acquainted with "Mort," hold him in high esteem for his sincere, modest, quiet ways. His conscientious endeavors to do things well, designate him to be a success in the career he chooses. Here's hoping, "Mort," old boy.

WHAT manner of man is that? A meticulousness of habit rivalled only by Chesterfield, a student, a good fellow—such was the debut into Lehigh society by Paul—product and pride of that small Pennsylvania city noted for its amber effervescent beverage and for its pretzels. Emulating the late Steinmetz, this unassuming young man, after two years at the University of Cincinnati, has triumphed over the bane of his otherwise cloudless modus vivendi at this technical institution of learning. Who knows but that tomorrow this youth with his crowning glory may startle the electrical world or be an oracle and disciple of this still greatly unexplored field!

But at this time of graduation and farewell to his schoolmates, his fellow students bear the indelible impress of that forceful personality, fineness of thought and action, perfection of understanding and living which set him on the road to great achievement.

This living proof of why girls leave home was none other than Paul, better known as "Coogie."

After the first tedious year of wrestling with the books, "Coogie" decided that it was necessary to mingle a little recreation with study, and since then has been "mixing" them—Hic!

Being a staunch advocate of the R. O. T. C.'s slogan—"For bigger and better wars"—he bought a uniform and enlisted. After two years of ordnance, he has become adept at knocking 'em dead by means of a vocal gas attack.

UPON first sight, "Chick" would undoubtedly leave the impression that he is very near to senility, but looks are deceiving. That bald spot would be enough to actually convince some people of the fact. However, he is not as aged and decrepit as he looks, and, by the way, never let him tell you that he got that way by plugging on the books. His marks would indicate that he has made plugging his life's work, while here, again, appearances are deceiving. "Chick" is a rare scholar, a gentleman, and believes in being square at all times.

He has figured prominently in athletics since his matriculation. Although never conspicuous, he has been so intimately associated with the executive end that he was chosen as chairman of the Board of Control of Athletics.

Centralia has a right to be as proud of "Chick," as we have, and when he returns to the mines, a few years will undoubtedly set him as a high official of at least one of the large concerns of that industry.

This tendency toward music soon left him and his attention was turned toward studies, Lehigh and his fraternity.

He was well known and well liked on the campus. His pleasing personality and inborn friendliness made him scores of friends and many acquaintances.

In activities, "Bill" lost out in the swimming managerial competition and editorial competition of the college papers by very close margins.

At the close of "Firpo's" university career, he expects to enter the banking field in New York and possibly add another name to the list of Wall Street conquerors. If he retains the energy and pep he has displayed at Lehigh, Dame Fortune cannot fail to follow in his footsteps.

Slowly at first, but surely, as the years rolled by, he absorbed all the good old Dutch customs, including the pretzels. To look at him you wouldn't think he was a snake, but he sure has the dope on the other fellow's girl after a party. Let it never be said that he wasn't ambitious, for, in addition to his courses at Lehigh, he took quite a few at a certain finishing school in Catasauqua and certainly became a finished product.

THE departure of Rawson from Flushing, L. I., was the occasion of a gleeful send-off. His advent into Bethlehem was unheralded and consequently served to fluster and unnervé this inexperienced lad. However, in a short time he became oriented.

Always a good student, "Chuck's" need of sophistication was most important, but was gotten after a rather lengthy period of personally conducted tours and resulted in his flunking several courses. However, a great deal of application to the books has brought him up to the mark and a diploma is only a matter of time.

His mysterious excursions, at night, to parts unknown lead us to believe that "Chuck" pursues matters feminine, but his Spinxlike attitude keeps us at a loss. We do know he receives letters from Stamford, Conn., and after cross-examination he admits that "she is a charming person."

After growing out of the stage of building "roofs and bridges" with Meccanno, he decided to collect some theory to round out his already enormous practical knowledge. With this in mind he entered Lehigh as a civil engineer after graduating from Scott High School in the old home town. "Chuck" is not all engineer, however. He hails from Allentown, the land of the free and home of the Dutch, where men are men and women eat peanuts. However, after plodding his weary way up South Mountain, and having become acquainted with the purser, he immediately resolved to quench his thirst for knowledge. So after drinking of Lehigh's fountain for four long years, he is now ready to face the cruel and hard world. Although having a propensity toward procrastination, being one of the advocates of that adage, "Better late than never," he usually manages to get there in the end, especially at the end of those 8 o'clock classes. However, the traction company and railroads between Allentown and Bethlehem, which he has supported these last four years, have assumed some of the blame for this tardiness. But no matter what his failings, he possesses many likeable qualities, so that in no matter what field of endeavor he may pursue, we are sure he will make his mark.

NEW YORK with its other six million humans is the stamping grounds of "Bert." He too, like Washington Irving, has talked with the sailors along the wharves and has watched the mighty ships sail for foreign lands. Probably that accounts for his inveterate love to see and do things exotic.

He arrived in the little town of Carlisle, bubbling over with collegiate enthusiasm. His enthusiasm was dampened, however, even as a freshman, and now the glamour has worn off considerably. Nevertheless he still has enthusiasm, but probably for other things and in other directions.

He expects to revolutionize the world which is characteristically youthful. Whether he shall succeed only time can prove. Probably he too will some day give up the ship, but it was a good fight after all.

There is only one more word to say and that is one of advice. If "Bert" can succeed in keeping his feet on the ground as well as his head above the clouds everything will end well.

"DAS ihrer Schatten nicht kleiner wachst!" This is the toast to which "Toots" made his bow. "Toots" is one of our Bethlehem boys and can tell us, in our sessions, when we had the habit of beating Lafayette. He is one of the mainstays of the class, being Napoleonic in stature, rain hat, looks and everything — but an empire. But perhaps his empire is unknown to us, although his geniality and smile are worth a lot. He is conspicuous on the campus because of his great speed in dashing to classes and always getting there late. "Toots" is quite a philosopher, his philosophy being that a cheerful smile and a lot of good nature will get one through any old course. Proof — he is graduating.

"Toots" intends to study law after finishing at Lehigh. Perhaps he figures on becoming a politician, as he looks like one, when chewing on a cigar. We wish him the best of luck in his future endeavors

"COW" GISRIEL, Mercersburg Academy's gift to Lehigh, hails from Baltimore, Md. While at the lower institution of learning, he became quite proficient at hurling the discus and putting the shot. He claims that he got his discus practice throwing oyster shells out over Delaware Bay. At any rate, he has hurled and putted himself into the track captaincy here at Lehigh.

Besides being a brawny athlete, "Cow" has another line—social lion. This mountain muscle can shake a mean Charleston, and is a true exponent of the Terpsichorean art. When in doubt as to what the well-dressed Lehigh man will wear, see Gisriel. About the only thing he doesn't wear around college is a grouchy look. Usually smiling, it is no wonder that he is named for that docile quadruped—"Cow."

As an undergraduate his spare time has been devoted to the study of metallurgy. We wish him success in this vocation and hope he soon learns that while an auto may be driven, a pencil must be lead.

"GOODIE" wandered into Bethlehem four years ago, after a sojourn at Mercersburg, in search of a real, honest-to-goodness, he-man school, and found it in Lehigh.

During his four years in this "dump," which includes the summers, he has been divided between two loyalties—his any-hour-of-the-night radio and the little lady at Cedar Crest. While the radio claims more of his time, we believe the young lady wins more of his interest.

Owen's greatest disappointment has been to discover that the prettiest—when seen at a distance—Bethlehem girls do not speak English.

While not participating in many of the campus activities, "Goodie" has always preserved a keen interest in wrestling and is one of these faithful, "He was on the scrubs," men. It has been his happy ability to make friends readily and these expect good tidings from him, if he doesn't drown in the radio waves.

"BILL's" good nature and persistency have won for him the respect of all his classmates, in spite of his huge proportions. "Bill" is, beyond a doubt, the "tallest" man in the class of '27. He is probably the most beloved man in college judging from the number of "Valentines" he receives. However, he usually manages to fool the "profs" and passes with good marks—even Calculus.

But, dear readers, we must confess that our "Bill" is a thieving scoundrel. Tell the boys about the Carnegie Tech game of 1925, "Bill"? He fails to see why he keeps on gaining weight considering that he hardly eats at all. He admits he isn't the reason why girls leave home, but he shyly confesses that he has a great deal to do with their staying away for a while.

We are sorry that we can't predict a very successful future for "Bill," as his ambitions are pretty low—he's a miner.

FOUR years ago, there came to our fair campus, a rotund young man from the sticks of Middletown, N. Y. He intended to study business, but it is a toss-up whether he has gained more fame through winning his way into the hearts of the fair sex of Bethlehem than he has by his scholastic ability. At any rate, he seems to be a success in both. We must admit that entertaining the fair sex has limited his scholastic attainments due to his inability to attend his eight o'clock classes after an enjoyable evening.

But now it is rumored that his heart has fallen within the confines of a single enchantress' power. It is hoped that she may not "Prove a Cuck," but with her fair charms she may weave the "Web of Future Happiness" for both.

IN THE year of our Lord 1904, on a balmy spring morning in June, was brought forth on this continent, not a new nation, but a leader of nations. He was that fair-haired boy who inspired the author of the great song, which goes thusly:

"You're my darling little laddie,
Golden hair and eyes of blue;
God who made the birds and flowers
Did His worst when He made you."

He early displayed the remarkable genius which was to make him one of the greatest railroad men of our time. At the age of five his voice had all the volume and even more penetrating quality than a steam locomotive. Of his boyhood little is known or worth knowing. On coming to college, he distinguished himself at once as being the only non-descript, self-propelling time table in existence. He studied diligently during his twenty-five years at Lehigh and as a result of a special faculty meeting and the excellence of his thesis on slow freights, he is to receive his degree as "C-vilest" engineer.

SEVEN years ago "Louie" embarked from Cucuta, Colombia, a land where beer is still beer and prohibition a fairy tale, in order to become a student and a scholar in some American university.

After three years in Pennington, N. J., spent mostly in mastering the intricacies of the English language and the American girl, he was pronounced mentally fit to enter Lehigh University.

So at Lehigh "Louie" began his real objective, that of becoming a mining engineer. But his success has not been all along that line. His string of Fords, starting with "Brutus," which was followed by "Calculus," which in turn was replaced by "Rusticus," have made him famous on the campus. Besides being a stalwart on the soccer squad and the wrestling squad, "Louie" is also one of our foremost ladies' men. Many a heart has been broken and many more telephone wires have heard the hum of his tender love song sung as only a Spaniard can do it. Rumor has it that he is considering a graduate course in some California university in geology.

"Herm's" main ambition is to find a table strong enough to withstand the terrible force of his cigarette packing. His greatest delight is giving advice to lovesick freshmen.

But in spite of these troubles, "Herm" has attained an enviable scholastic record—even if he did differ with the chemistry department. He is an historian of note and a bridge player of no mean ability. What more can we say about this gifted gentleman?

We have no doubts about "Herm's" future success in his chosen field; that of the legal profession. He is a go-getter.

Rugged and weatherbeaten by the elements of that great wide waste, "Jack" stepped up and did the manly thing for Lehigh with the tip of his soccer shoe. Nor was that all; "Jack" and "Jack" Petrikin had bitter brawls over the policy of the frosh baseball team, and, of course, "Jack" always won.

There's a pleasing thing about "Jack": he always blushes so accommodatingly. This promotes wonder that he's always to be found at house party, but those are the facts in the case. And such girls as "Jack" brings around (?) Ye scribe doesn't know whether to kiss or kill them, but we suppose that "Jack" takes care of the situation adequately.

ONE can hardly say that to embark from Brooklyn upon one's college career is worthy of distinction. Brooklyn is known to be the abiding place of churches and cemeteries, but somehow we feel that the good of the most worthy spirits of that native village have been embued in our subject. In his freshman year, he was very much a type—namely, green, and as usual the years have dealt kindly in supplying him with knowledge of theoretical and worldly affairs. The unusual features of the subject lies in the retention of those traits of character that are always to be praised (the dean to the contrary, notwithstanding), and there is the belief that he possesses the best traits of Brooklyn. We believe that these traits should carry him far in the world of business and we wish him godspeed.

TWENTY-FOUR years before the Quantic-Marine game, or on October 16, 1902, "Shimmy" first cast a look, from his ever-smiling face, about the Harmon homestead and decided that he would stay. He has decided the same thing every place he went. After gracing Blair Academy for three years, he took his place on the campus of Lehigh, where he has remained for nigh on to six years. (He stayed.) "Shim" has been a tower of strength at guard on the big Brown team for the past four years. One would little think, to look at him, that he also was at home in the pool, swimming the distances and, his last year, an able captain. Just a great big boy, bubbling over with fun and smiles that won for him numerous friends.

"Bob" evidently had a hunch that some one awaited him in the East. Choosing a rigid course, he became a disciple of "Skipper." Little did he first realize that those leading positions which were then merely aspirations, would be occupied by him a few years hence. "Strata" distinguished himself by maneuvering his class through its first two years. Imbued with qualities essential to leadership, he branched out in every possible field of college activity and held a prominent position in each. With fair play his aim, he acquired hordes of friends.

Although "Strata" evoked the nickname from his elocutory elaborations on geology, the latter art facilitated his selling of Lehigh to future South Mountaineers through his service in deputation. If character, personality, achievement, and, above all, success in love, are criterions, "Bob" will etch his name and deeds on life's balance sheet.

"HARVE," as our hero has been named, hails from a little town up the river known by all Lehigh men as the city of Catawqua. This town is known even as Troy for the beautiful women who live there. "Harve" indeed is the man to see when a date is wanted in Catty.

Harvey came to Lehigh with a high scholastic standing, having been an honor man of his class. This scholastic reputation he has upheld remarkably during his four years with us.

One of "Harve's" chief pleasures is tennis, in which he is fairly adept. At least, we say so, for we must humor him. Tennis, however, is not his most noted recreation, for he has done wonders in captivating feminine hearts. All Fountain Hill breathes easier when "Harve" leaves.

Seriously he is a fine fellow and a credit to our class and to Lehigh. We sincerely hope that the success which he has enjoyed among us will continue with him in the metallurgical world.

C. E.; Varsity Soccer Squad (2, 3); Tau Beta Pi

SOME four years ago this bright lad left Gloucester, N. J., to continue the search for the knowledge that all good "ci-vile" (blame it on Harry Fretz) engineers are supposed to know. Whether he found it or not is hard to tell, but he has gone far in that direction, and there is not a bit of doubt that "enry" will be a great success.

Why he left dear old Gloucester is as difficult of understanding as to understand why he didn't go away to sea. For Hawkins seems to have a leaning toward the roving sailor's life. Maybe instead of building bridges and other things, he will some day be standing on the bridge or the quarter-deck. Maybe he will have a llama ranch in South America, or an ice cream parlor at the North Pole. The only thing that is clear about his future is that it will be successful, whether it be on land, or sea or sky.

Hawkins early acquired the habit of earnest study and has been consistent throughout in doing his work thoroughly. It has led to good rewards and will count even more afterward.

Yes; he'll do!

HERE is the man extraordinary. Read carefully the list of activities our "Jack" has acquired and you will realize that men like this don't come to Lehigh every year. Besides his other achievements, Hayes has done the impossible by not flunking a course since he entered college, and to his roommate's best knowledge has seldom if ever cracked a book.

There are very few fields of endeavor that this man has not been able to conquer. Besides his marked athletic and scholastic abilities, "Jack" is THE social lion of Lehigh. Needless to say it is not hard for the young ladies he knows, and others he doesn't know, to fall in love with him when their turn comes, and through it all he has come out unsmitten.

We not only predict, but expect that more than ordinary success will come to this far from ordinary man in whatever field he next sets out to conquer.

"Purd" came to Lehigh for the same reason that many other good boys leave—because he discovered a natural aversion to engineering. After four years at N. Y. M. A., he battled the faculty at Rensselaer for two more. He resumed the fight here in the fall of 1924, only to be defeated in February. Being of a persevering nature, "Purd" decided to sojourn in South America and learn some revolutionary methods. When he came back in September, he revolutionized his attack to the extent of changing to B. A. Since then "E's" and "F's" are no longer in his category.

"Purd" tells us with great enthusiasm of his last summer's experiences at Ohio State, where good times and coeds run riot together.

Although "Bob" Young and "Bob" Moser are not entirely unknown to him, "Purd" is now wearing out books with a savagery that is beautiful to see.

"Purdy's" numerous friends at Lehigh wish him his well earned success in whatever he undertakes.

Owing to his extreme aversion to the opposite sex and their antagonism to smoke and grease, "Pete" should make an excellent M. E. Of course the honor of "Tau Bete" neither adds to or detracts from this latent possibility.

When Hertz has refused to drag to house parties for the last time, gone to his last dance stag, and seen us win a Lafayette game, the brothers of the class, say about 1950, will look at this picture and say:

Now that he has labored in our midst gaining fame as a "Servile," a short resume of his activities are not amiss. During the past two years he has gone through Lehigh in commuters' style. His weekly visits home have long been a source of mystery. Finally these trips were solved—we saw HER. No wonder that boy commuters.

THE exact status of this kind-faced lad from the Thirty-third Street district has never been determined, thus enabling him to evade class dues for four years. However, he has now attained to better things and expects to graduate with the class of '27.

"Jack" can explain anything at any time to any one, including the Dean and Professor Gipson. This is a very valuable accomplishment and has stood him in good stead during his activities in both the engineering and business departments. Also those who live with him always feel better about their troubles when he delivers his golden advice of, "Constant application to studies and consistent attendance of classes" and "Never give a sucker an even break."

"Jack" has a good attendance record in the affairs of the social world. He is also a prominent member of many clubs within the city limits of Bethlehem. When he leaves, the swimming squad will lose one of its most persistent members as he has been going out for the team since time immemorial.

How distinctly we remember, 'twas the 15th of September, 1923, when the Buffalo Express deposited an unassuming and somewhat vacuous looking youngster who seemed in no particular hurry to race up to college and go through the business of registration.

As a freshman, his time was spent crabbing the course and reading the works of Gautier, Oscar Wilde and Schopenhauer. Consequently, a vast amount of this heavy reading served to instill "Dud" with a brand of cynicism entirely disproportionate to his years.

His analysis of freshmen is that all frosh are dumb, but a good frosh remains dumb only during his freshman year. The analysis is obviously correct since Hoover snapped out of it entirely. Of course, he is still cynical, but his cynicism melts away before the lilting laughter of fair females (only lilting laughter).

"Dud" majored in metallurgy and intends to enter the gold refining business. He is still somewhat inclined to good literature, and his favorite poem is "Down in the Lehigh Valley."

IN THE fall of 1923, "Ken" Houseman dropped in for a sojourn at Lehigh. "Ken" hails from New Jersey, a state that is known for its mosquitoes, "pig woman" and the Hall-Mills murder.

"Ken" found it quite difficult to become accustomed to spending his week-ends in Bethlehem, and shortly after his last class on Saturday one could see him at the Central Railroad ticket office purchasing a ticket for Plainfield. But after we had viewed the photograph of "the attraction," it is easily understood why Saturday and Sunday in Plainfield were so desirable. Needless to say, the fair sex of Bethlehem didn't rate at all.

In his sophomore year, "Ken" had the misfortune of poor health just before mid-year exams, but after that one close call, his scholastic record was never in danger again.

The many friends that "Ken" has acquired during his stay at Lehigh join in wishing him success and we are sure that not long in the future he will be mentioned prominently in the engineering world.

IT TOOK us a long while to believe that "Charley" was a Mexican until we saw him jump, and then his performance convinced us that he was the original "Mexican Jumping Bean" or one of its closest relatives; why he even jumped bail once.

His efforts toward becoming civilized started out West, where men are men and women ride them. Whatever made him leave the great open spaces and come to Lehigh has always been a mystery to us, though our suspicions may be well founded. He was the original "sheik" and if all Mexicans are like him we know now why "Mexican girls leave home."

Nobody ever had anything against him; he was indeed the height of good nature. He made many friends and all the kind that will never forget him.

WHEN dear old "Joe" Lehigh first saw "Jed" trudging up the campus, he rubbed his hands together and chuckled with glee. Here we have some of the finest material afforded from below the Mason and Dixon Line. Always looking for bigger and better things, "Jed" has lived up to his first appearances; and as a senior has already raised two of the finest flowing mustaches on the campus.

This Pennsylvania Dutch neighborhood has become very dear to "Jed", for he has traveled some ten thousand miles from Bethlehem to Allentown and back, during his few years at Lehigh, and by the end of the second semester he is sure to equal the record held by the Lehigh Valley Transit Company's oldest motor-man.

When amused, "Jed" emits the world's most peculiar laugh: it is a cross between a cackle and a snort and is most often heard amid the well-known sounds which emanate from a good old-fashioned game of stud poker. Lehigh is proud to send "Jed" out to electrify the world.

FROM the wilds of Virginia there appeared on old South Mountain the yellow peril and with it came "Jim" in the pursuit of higher knowledge. Knowledge was not the only thing pursued, for the cops have been pursuing our "Speed demon" ever since.

"Jim" had great ambitions of being an engineer, and staggered through many tedious labs only to be persuaded by Berry, that he should be where all good men land, in Hyphen Hall and the business department.

"Jim's" southern drawl soon made him known by us all, but behold with the years come changes. "Johnny Reb" is no more. Civilization has had its effect even upon the sons of "Old Virginny." Now neither blinding snow nor drifts make "Jim" brag of the Sunny South. He has even been caught talking with a dutch accent and going around with dutch girls. ALTHOUGH Clifford hails from Wilkes-Barre, the land of coal mines and coal-crackers, he wisely decided to take a course in chemistry in preference to mining. The world is thus enriched with another "odoriferous engineer."

"Clif" is the bearer of quite a few nicknames, but several have become distinctly obsolete. In his freshman year, he was greeted with "Dumbell," which name has remained, however, inappropriate, as his class grades of the last few years have proven.

Most all great men have their weaknesses and in the end fall on account of them, and "Clif" is no exception to the rule except that he hasn't fallen yet. While quite at home with his fellow men, he always manages to steer clear of the opposite sex. This could probably not be attributed to weakness, but rather to good management.

Although not a shining star in athletics, "Clif" has on more than one occasion shown his athletic ability in intra-mural sports on court, gridiron, track and mat. Given half a chance in the future, "Clif" will show that he can produce the goods.

EMBRYO M. E. and maker of haste slowly. But "Gene" knows what he knows and has a lot of information parked in his dome which he will part with under diligent and persistent interrogation. Absolutely nothing volunteered. An oyster is a noisy nuisance compared to Keller.

A wrestler of sorts and a genuine lover of athletics but too conscientious to court the glory of the gory at the risk of flunking out.

"Gene" comes from Washington, D. C., where he acquired that look of an innocent bystander, just letting the skirts drift by. What "Gene" wonders is, are girls people?

Keller can exercise a motorcycle or a horse, but is really expert at driving a car with one hand. We don't know why this perfection but suggest that some time in the future he intends to find the answer to the above question.

"Oh, well now!"

FROM the thriving metropolis of Ridgewood, N. J., came an innocent "frosh" to the mighty halls of Lehigh University. "Ted" became immediately popular for his ability to cure the numerous ailments of collegiate radios. From this sprang the Lehigh Radio Society, of which he later became president. During his career at Lehigh he tried his foot at soccer, and his hand at journalism. Later he decided that "the tongue is mightier than the pen" and went in for honorary fraternities. A shark at anything mathematical, he was always willing to aid his less fortunate brethren over the tough spots in calculus and similar subjects. Later he turned to cultural studies and after learning how it was done, sallied forth to win the hearts, but not the hands of the fair sex of Bethlehem. Any night "Ted" could be seen dashing around the streets in his flivver, with a fair lady at his side. Taken altogether, "Ted's" career at college was both brilliant and commendable and we wish him the greatest of luck after he leaves.

THE handsome young man pictured above is none other than "Georgie" Kennedy. Ever hear of Lansford before? I never did until I met George. Then I realized that it must be quite the place.

George expects to be a civil engineer, so don't be surprised if some day you see a billboard advertising the famous Kennedy dams. Perhaps it will read, "When better dams are built, Kennedy will build them."

In addition to civil engineering, George has devoted considerable study to something slightly different, namely, girls. In fact, I think George has learned even more about the latter than he has about engineering. For further details consult the Lehigh Telephone Company as to the source of his numerous calls.

There is a slight probability that George may forsake engineering for business, as he has demonstrated his ability in the latter, being business manager of the Brooklyn and White.

However, whatever career he may pursue, his success is assured.

"BILL" "KEN" "SPARTAN"

B. A.: Arcadia, Club de Quinze (3, 4); Vice President (4); Musical Clubs (2, 3, 4); Beauv Arts

A FIRST-RATE portrait-impression of "Bill" Kenworthy would show a rather quiet, unobtrusive sort of fellow sitting in a comfortable armchair smoking and saying with a gentle smile, "Go to hell, will you!" "Bill" has been known to say far more devastating things than this with even greater equanimity. To come under "Bill's" displeasure is a terrible thing; one is likely to be annihilated with a word. And the awful part of it is that "Bill's" opinion is very apt to be right.

But if after a critical once-over, not to mention twice-over, which may or may not cause the person to become roasted until well-done on both sides, he is found to meet "Bill's" own test of what is vulgarly termed a "regular fellow," then he may indeed consider himself among the elect. For he will have the privilege of acquaintanceship with a fellow whose company is never tiresome and who is always ready to take his part in whatever work or mischief is afoot. "That's what she said." No doubt she did.

'T WAS down in one of these dungeons
You know these houses of hell,
Where wine an' women an' liquor
Seem to cast a spell.

Well!—we boys were sittin 'round,
Just tossin' a little bull,
When—God! what'n ear-splittin' shriek!
Sound of a mad-man from hell.

We didn't listen twice.
Ya don't have to listen double,
To know damn well a shriek like that—
Well! some guys in trouble.

We found the blarney sittin there.
God! but the night was cold.
We took the begger in and warmed 'im up,
And this was the tale he told.

It seems he was one of these high-brow

Ch. E., Ch. E. Society 1, 2, 3, 4

FROM the great open spaces in and around Curwensville there came forth this tall handsome smiling young man who was destined to create such a sensation at Lehigh. For behold, we were told by a representative of the fair sex that "Kittie" has the nicest smile of any boy in college. With something like that to start on, there is no wonder that he has gotten as far as he has. Just how far that is we don't quite know, but having lived next door to him for three long terrible years we are prophesying even greater things. "Kittie" is most as gentle and pleasant as his name sounds if one doesn't get him excited, but when he gets started, just stand back. "Kittie" is a good hard steady worker and "knows his stuff" in the vernacular of our institution, wherefore we will all be much surprised if he is not a prominent man in the Ch. E. line some day.

CARRIED by the swirl of Niagara which swept many inhabitants of South Mountain in the direction of the East, "Irv" was left high and dry in Bethlehem.

In a very short while he had become a protege of the business department, thus equipping himself to do big things in Buffalo.

Being an ardent exponent of athletics, lacrosse in particular, the major portion of "Irv's" outdoor activities were well taken care of. "Gene" Tunney is his model, and he has proved to be an enthusiastic supporter.

His terpsichorean trend is well evinced by his frequent visits to the music store in quest of "Jan" Garber's latest.

"Irv," we know, will make his mark. His pleasing personality, well met and hearty, and his willingness to co-operate, are assets in his favor.

INCLUDED in the crop of potential Lehigh graduates four autumns ago, was a big sunny-faced lad. Up at the dean's office he gave his name as Stanley Arthur Kitzinger, of Yonkers, N. Y., but to us he immediately became "Stan," or "Kid," as we have affectionately learned to call him.

Always on hand for the fun, "Kid" has likewise been a hard and loyal co-worker. From the outset he showed unusual promise in chemistry and became one of the chemical department's prize students. However, in his junior year he dropped chemistry and concentrated his attention on a once new Dodge, which has since been the thorn of his existence. This, coupled with many anxious days before and between house parties, in quest of "the dream girl," has caused him many sleepless nights.

But now, we say "au revoir." Just as "Stan" was big when he came to us, so is he even bigger now—above all, bigger in the esteem with which he is held by all who know him. Possessed of a golden heart, "Stan" has been a friend to many and a friend tried and true.

JOHNNY" KNEBELS is a product of Bethlehem High. It didn't take him long to get into the swim and so it was a shock to find out that he did not expect to return for his sophomore year. But Providence saw to it that John's tall figure again joined the ranks, and you can see him most any day engaged in his favorite occupation—leading the band, for John is a musician—in fact, "clarinetist extraordinaire," although he denies it.

But John has one peculiarity—girls!!! He is the only man that we know on the campus that doesn't go "dating."

Even though John is a B. A., he'll never lack a job, for he's a drug clerk when he isn't a steward at the country club. But in spite of this he doesn't consider himself a success, for he says that with all his experience with coco cola, etc. he hasn't yet found "the mixture" which will produce more hair on his head.

WHEN "Ed" arrived in Bethlehem four years ago he went over to "Fem Sem" and tried to register. Some kindly soul put him wise to the fact that Lehigh was on the south side of the river. He came over and has been with us ever since.

"Ed's" a true Lehigh man, he has joined in many college activities, has done more than his share in promulgating the "hello" habit among incoming frosh, passed four terms of "met" problems, and has thunk calculus. There is some mysterious influence that draws him to St. Luke's, but between his visits there he has somehow managed to keep well up in all his studies.

If you want to hear "Ed" get off a long tale of woe, just stop him sometimes and ask him his opinion of the mathematical department. That calculus course seems to have lowered his esteem of Professor Bennett & Co.

All in all, "Ed" is what we call a "real fellow," and we are sure that his personality, together with his ability in the metallurgical profession, will mean success.

BACK in the early part of this century of radio, bobbed hair, and prohibition, our Norman announced his arrival into the world with yells which reverberated through the streets of Washington, and he has ever since been announcing his presence. It is the opinion of some that his lack of hair may be explained by his voice. He yells so loud at times that the roots of his hair are jarred loose, thereby causing his hair to fall out.

Norman spent his tender years in the schools of D. C. Having a brother who distinguished himself at Cornell, he decided that he would not detract from his brother's glory, and thus he came to Lehigh. His success at making a name for himself can be attested to by most every one.

Norman is a decidedly regular attendant at a particular church, but his spiritual salvation is not the whole reason for this brand of pleasure.

Although not a civil engineer, he is an authority on bridge. He never let a mere thing like work interfere with placing the benefits of his experience at the disposal of the freshmen.

THE plot of this story winds itself about the personage whose facial features are depicted above, our own Edward L. Krone. Although "Nick" was born in Hackensack, N. J., he soon outlived that handicap by traveling to many distant lands, and started out to make his mark in the world.

"Nick" entered high school and blazed through that educational institution as a scholar, a gentleman and an athlete—for the call of the gridiron was strong in Edward L. With this experience back of him, "Nick" entered Lehigh in the fall of 1923, where he quietly and unobtrusively has assembled a host of friends and a learning of business ethics. The personality which "Nick" has acquired thus far, coupled with his financial training, makes him an ideal graduate.

Commencement time has rolled around again, and the portals of life are opening for the class of 1927. When this class meets in ten or fifteen years, Edward L. will probably be called upon to tell how he made his first million. Best of luck, "Nick"!

A QUIET lad was George Kuck when he first came to Lehigh. During the first few weeks his thoughts centered on Forest Hills, and those he left behind. But homesickness was soon forgotten in the host of new friends he made.

Although his course was arts, and did not cause him much worry, in his sophomore year he elected "photography"—and thereby encountered the trials and tribulations incident to the making of a print—on a cupid's bow, or on paper. This course successfully passed, he entered once more into the spirit of Lehigh, and entered the competition for assistant manager of track. Although unsuccessful, he put up his usual good fight.

"Justus" attended one summer school—and from his stories of the session, he should qualify either as a child's nurse, or as a grandfather, so varied were his dates.

"Bobby's" personality and genial, happy-go-lucky way have made him popular and well liked both in his class and among his associates. His versatility will sponsor his success in any occupation he may enter.

INTRODUCING the gentleman from Perth Amboy: This most versatile representative of homo sapiens entered Mr. Lehigh's College a few short years ago, and in spite of the auspicious initials (E. E.), decided that the business course would furnish a more lucrative field for his endeavor. Nor was he wrong. In the time that he could spare from his studies he tortured a tenor banjo so persistently that the musical clubs admitted him to their fold. This accomplished, he decided that a khaki uniform is the true way to a girl's heart, so he became an officer in the army. This move appears to have been successful, if we can judge by the color of the envelopes in his mail.

As to his future, Father Time alone can tell the outcome, but with the foregoing in mind, you are permitted to form an opinion.

We might add that he is one of the few living business men that can help an engineer with his accounting without audible expressions of pity for his ignorance.

ABOUT three years ago, amidst the blowing of whistles, the tooting of automobile horns, and many joyous shouts, a hardy-looking coal-cracker alighted from the Black Diamond, and gazed about with much expectation. He soon discovered, however, that the greeting was not for him. Bethlehem was just having another fire!

Although he began his quest for knowledge as a Ch. E. at Carnegie Tech, he soon perceived the advantages of taking an M. E. degree at Lehigh, whereupon he proceeded nobly to uphold the honor of his native city, Scranton.

"Jack" maintains that the biggest half of a fellow's education comes from his activities, and has ceaselessly tried to find the combination by which he could get a degree in mechanical engineering, work on activities, and have a little fun. He has given much valuable time to the editorial staff of the Brown and White, for which Lehigh owes him a debt of gratitude.

"C's" ONLY fault is the fact that he is a Bethlehem boy. That is not his fault however, and he is doing his best to live it down. If he had his way, he would hail from the sunny South, especially from the vicinity of Winston-Salem, N. C. Wonder why?

Although at times he is called "Half-Pint," a name which merely refers to his stature and not his capacity for certain beverages, he certainly makes himself heard and one can always tell when he is around.

While attending Mr. Lehigh's college he has earnestly tried to absorb all that is taught in the business department. "C" is also taking several courses in the history department which he likes and gets along so well in. He is also furthering his education along other lines, namely, a course at the local "Y" in "How to be a Pool Shark" and a correspondence course with Winston-Salem.

For the present his ambition is to be a C. P. A. or one of the country's leading bankers. He has already started on his way to the latter goal and only time will tell how well he succeeded.

"Bud" hails from Westfield, N. J., and entered our institution of higher learning via Culver. At Culver, "Bud" learned among other things the difference between the ends of a rifle and how to swim. He learned both of these things well. M. S. and T. held no fears, nor did the water, as "Bud" carried the Brown and White, as a member of the varsity swimming team, for three years.

"Bud" is an excellent student and has a well-deserved record. What his future plans are we do not know, but we are wishing him success in every venture in which he puts forth.

ALTHOUGH Lester started his collegiate career at Penn State four years ago, he showed his good judgment when he transferred to Lehigh in his sophomore year. Since then he has developed into a real embryonic South Mountain engineer while in the cohorts of William Esty.

His past history around the wilds of New Hanover is unknown to most of his fellow classmates, but let present actions speak for the past. It is indeed a rare occasion when the collegiate Ford is not seen wending its way homeward every Saturday and returning early the following Monday morning.

In his senior year "Les" applied his theoretical knowledge of four years to some practical use and constructed a six-tube radio receiver. This was christened by his fellow classmates as the Leidy Squealidyne Mostotime Radio Set. Needless to say, everybody enjoyed listening in, and we all wished that A. C. M. were as easy to absorb. It was a deep secret for a long time, but we are now willing to let it be known that Lester was one of "Sara's" best customers.

It is said that "nobody loves a fat man." We have here the exception to the rule; for we know of many fair demoiselles who will miss "Joe" when he leaves, not to mention "Harry's." "Joe's" hobby is women, and we are afraid that some of "Joe's" hobbies have turned into habits, the most notable one being M. A.

BELIEVE it or not, "Bob" should have been a sailor, not because Asbury Park elected to care for him during all those long years while he sat and gazed over the old Atlantic, but because he anticipated, true to tradition—one in every port; and now, no matter whether it be from Maine to Balboa or the Atlantic to the Monocacy, he's a sailor in mind if not in body.

However, it's on the banks of the Monocacy that, as he claims, his greatest collegiate achievement took place—a date on "Fem Sem's" campus. But, in our estimation, we are forced to say Liberty High has far surpassed anything "Fem Sem" could ever hope to offer "The General."

But when "Bob" gets out the old banjo and calls for a "thousand pounds of harmony," clouds in the intellectual world disappear, replaced by the blue smoke of the Charleston, Black Bottom, or what have you?

IN the fall of 1923 an attempt was made to make Lehigh a bigger and better institution. Enter—George Emerson Loomis. Although very quiet during the first two years, the needed stimulus was found and Waldo stepped out and became our efficient tennis manager.

His lessons have not suffered due to his extra-curricula activities, as is evidenced by being elected into the Eta Kappa Nu, our honorary senior electrical society. While not busy arguing the merits of the electrical engineering course, he is writing letters to managers of other college tennis teams.

Although possessing the qualities of a "ladies' man," he does not bother furthering himself along those lines. Some of his close friends believe, however, that he has a soft spot in his heart for some one in Coopersburg.

All in all he is a darn good egg—the kind that are hard to beat!

"Spike's" activities have not been confined to the recognized studies, for our hero realized that even though the University doesn't provide co-education, one shouldn't go out and study independently. And because the returns of such study are admittedly great, "Dave" made very thorough researches. Therein lies the secret of his great success. "Dave" says, "They all fall."

"IKE's" freshman year was not colored by many outside activities, but remembrances of hauling trunks, telephones to be answered, and downtown service at night will always stick with him. Neither will he forget the night a dash for freedom across the campus ended in capture by the freshmen when he attempted to get to the sophomore banquet, for that dash ended in free transportation a few miles above Bath—and it was in the "wee small hours" that the railroad ties finally brought him, footsore, into Allentown.

He is majoring in education, and quite frequently indicates that he might teach after Lehigh has decided to turn him from her doors. His favorite class, however, is the observation class at Liberty High School. Just what he observes is not quite clear, but the telephone calls mount up more each month and especially to the West Side. He has many other interests also, with the saxophone, football and Syracuse heading the list.

"CHARLIE" is a representative of a modern triumvirate: baseball, boats and—well, the alliteration falls through there. Baseball he knows from many angles. As a statistician, he's a Hughey Fullerton. His world's series predictions were mighty accurate to the rue of the pocketbooks of some not so deeply initiated into that occult science.

Boats! Ask him anything about boats that he doesn't know: names, tonnage, speed, what kind of champagne is served on each, just what is liable to happen on a moonlit night on a certain deck; all these bits of valuable information come within his ken.

The third factor of the triumvirate, or, in other words, the factor, does "Charlie's" discriminative powers a world of credit. Add up these items: the Princeton game, something of an unmentionable Lehigh nature, and some one who is mentioned ever and anon by "Charlie," and is it any wonder that he has been in a helluva daze ever since!

"HERB," "Mac," "Sparrow," or what ever you want to call him, is indeed a character. Generous, seclusive, solemn, and some times sober, he holds many with a mystifying something. It is hard to understand him, for he seems to dote in the thought that he has something in his mind that no one else ever thought of, always reluctant in saying more than is necessary.

Due to his seclusiveness, it has been difficult to extract "Herb's" past. Some few things have leaked out, and in piecing them together there can be no doubt that he was a man of the world with worldly experience. He was once a prep school marvel with respect to football and presidencies. He was an experienced woodsman of the Maine woods and no mean canoeist. It must be said here that "Herb" is very highly imaginative and we can give no further recommendation as to his proficiency in any of these things other than his word.

In all there may be faults in him, but there are so many things to overshadow these that they are hard to find.

BACK in the dim days "fore de war" there was a lad who came to old South Mountain for about a year's visit. The climate proved unhealthy and he left for a while, only to return in the infant days of the class of 1927. Somewhat older and more mature, it took us awhile to know him, but when we did we were won as his friends immediately. Quiet, self-contained, and very earnest, "Mac" was here for work, and made no bones about showing it. The list of scholastic honors above will testify to that. Few men that have ever graduated from Lehigh can show such a record. His other activities brought him before the student body in a way that will not soon be forgotten. As chairman of the Arcadia committee which formulated the truce with Lafayette, he was instrumental in fostering a big step forward in the relations of the two colleges. B. A.; Varsity Tennis (4)

"JIM" has often told us that chemical engineering at Delaware was "too easy," and for that reason he came to Lehigh to complete two years of intensive study of that difficult course in the arts college.

"Gentleman Jim"—that's a fitting term in every respect which we can see—and we are led to believe—in many which we don't see. It is an accident which keeps "Jim" here over week-ends and yet those beautiful creatures are still a mystery to us.

"Jim" excels in tennis primarily. His intellectual brilliance is overshadowed only by the sun, when it shines, but most of his good friends admit his ability at bridge could be a relentless enemy of their financial resources. "Jim," however, hasn't turned professional, believing it's not wise to capitalize one's ability.

It's frankly admitted, as a tree climber, Malloy and his fire chariot are insurmountable, and only Red Grange can equal this combination in their open-field running.

"I'll bet you did!"

ALTHOUGH born in Connecticut, "Dick" was compelled at an early age to move to the thriving metropolis of Bethlehem. Here, in the due course of time, and much to his own astonishment, he graduated from Bethlehem High School in '23. The shock of this accomplishment was too great for "Dick" and affected him for a long time afterward—in fact, may have been the direct reason for his selection of the electrical field for his life's work. With periods of determined studying interspaced by a great many evenings "out," he managed to slowly wend his way about the numerous pit falls of an engineering student. Add a few more years to "Dick's" life and we can picture him as a highly successful motorcycle mechanic. In conclusion, let us remark that "Dick" must have a weakness for peanuts, otherwise how explain the regular trips to Allentown.

WHEN in Rome do as the Romans do; and "Ted" being a true Roman, always crashes through. Coming via Williston and Union College, he finally landed in Lehigh, where he proceeded to show the town of Bethlehem, "What the well-dressed college man should wear." Besides being a Lord Chesterfield, "Ted" gained quite a reputation as an end on the scrubs, to say nothing of his ability as a hockey player.

"Ted" is quite the little motorist too, and many a brother has had a never-to-be-forgotten ride with him. His chief delight is fixing cars, and we defy any man to make a car hold together any longer than he has.

Only the better social functions have the privilege of "Marcus's" unusual company, and his energy and original ideas controlled by an exceedingly level head, have helped out numerous organizations. "To you, 'Ted,' we wish the best of luck and concede unlimited success."

"NED" came to Lehigh from Yale at the beginning of his sophomore year, and immediately attracted attention by his activities on the football field, wrestling mat, and drill field, turning out to be one of our star ends and a snappy officer of the R. O. T. C. in his senior year.

"Whitey" is one of those quiet, serious-minded fellows, who proves that old adage that "Still water runs deep." No one can quite figure out just what "Ned" is thinking about, but he always comes out near the top when the score is added up.

"Ned's" future is one of many prospects. Being a native of Bethlehem, he may prove to be a steel magnate, or, maybe, run a silk mill; at any rate, he surely knows his home town from start to finish, and undoubtedly will be successful in whatever he may attempt to do.

WRITING obituaries is delicate business at best, but it's doubly difficult when the subject is as decidedly alive as is Harry. If we tell you all the nice things about him, you'd suspect him of writing it himself, and if we tell some of the things we might, he'd have to in self-protection.

We remember Harry as a freshman, because in our verdant ranks four years ago he stood out by virtue of his quiet dignity and his ever-cheerful temperament. Now, looking over those same ranks, somewhat thinned and wholly sophisticated, we find that he still stands out with the same modest reserve. In four years' close association with Harry we have never known him to lose his temper or to waver in decisions.

Even daily association with Petriken during football season failed to sour Harry's supply of human kindness. Managing a team that loses seven in a row is apt to be a thankless job, but when said manager tends continually to his knitting, then you know you've got a real one.

"KEN" originally came from Mercersburg and he still maintains that he does. He wasn't a very big man there, nor after four years here has he grown at all; but one should not poke fun at his stature. It was bad enough when he tried to get a uniform in the R. O. T. C. He is a Scotchman and he lives up to all the Scotch jokes in more ways than one. Of course, he buys the Saturday Evening Post and to show that he is an American he ever reads Mencken's Mercury. Pittsburgh is his home town and although it isn't a place where one can wear a shirt for more than one day, still he's proud of it. Dance—why he was a dancing fool, but the reason he isn't now is because he can't find a girl his size. And, of course, he will never get married, no never! Why? Well, it's a long story. Ask "Ken," or as she used to call him—"Scraps."

BORN in the wilds of West Philadelphia "Mac" liked his city enough to go to Temple University. When, however, he reached manhood, he decided to go to a man's school, so off he hiked to Lehigh. A sporting instinct on his part made his presence known in various classes, his "ultimately" pool being remembered with great joy by his classmates.

A terrible man with music and with the "wimmen," his graduation will be looked upon with sorrow in some quarters. It, however, will not be a surprise, for it had been expected for the last few years. He has been gradually paying his way to total absence after graduation by leaving us for weekends and going back to his native haunts. He is said to have compiled the record of being in Bethlehem but one week-end during all of 1925-26.

THE life of John Henry Metz, previous to his departure from Scranton, Pa., for the college on Old South Mountain, contains little of interest, for he had religiously avoided wine, women and song. But when the last fond farewell had been said, ye old apron string snapped asunder. From that sad or happy day, as the case may be, many interesting events took place in the life of this fair youth.

He immediately added the subject of women to his regular E. E. roster, and judging from numerous conquests at Cedar Crest and elsewhere, has enjoyed a generous measure of success in this most interesting extra-curricula activity.

But books, like women, engendered no fear in this aspiring youth, and his ability and industry secured his election to two honorary engineering societies. As yet he has not decided whether to become a football mentor, a bespectacled professor, or a practicing engineer.

"Well, I don't know about that!"

LOOK, dear reader, at the above list of achievements and, tell us, can you think of any other field of endeavor that "Irv" might enter? The recipient of nearly every major honor that Lehigh can give, "Irv" now stands on the threshold of graduation, looking for more worlds to conquer. To enter into every field and phase of college life and do justice to all is an attainment few reach, for the combined qualities of determination, grit and personality alone will get you there.

But "all work and no play makes little boys dull," and because our "Irv" is not dull, we strongly suspect that somewhere in his busy week, he finds time to sneak in a little play now and then.

However, to chronicle all the events of "Irv's" college career would occupy more space than is available, so in predicting his future, we know that the sterling qualities that are his will carry him far.

HERE we have a young man who knew enough to leave Lebanon Valley and come to college. Since his arrival at Lehigh he has become an exponent of the well known "Ein-stein" theory that 90 percent of a college education is secured outside of the laboratories, and incidentally "Roge" gets in a good 90 percent.

"Roge" is quite versatile in "indoor sports" such as cards, "tickling" the uke, dancing—and other things. Since he acquired an Overland he has contracted two weaknesses; one for Mealey's, and the other for weekend trips. How his "Knight" motor survived a trip to Michigan summer school is still a mystery. But we will take "Roge's" word for it—it never yet failed him.

Even with all this, "Roge" has found time to become a good student and a loyal worker for the C. E. Society. Here's hoping another sheep will be missing his skin this June.

Now that he is about to leave us, we all feel deep regret and wish him the utmost success.

A GENTLEMAN, strong of character, and genial personality, a son of Apollo and an image of him—this is Arthur A. Molitor. With the qualities of a demon analyst, "Art" entered Lehigh bent on chemical engineering, but his success, aside from gray matter, might be partially attributed to his truly chemical requisite of handling "impromptu student conferences."

It was not until his junior year that "Art" was wrested from his claim to bachelor state to dwell in Alice's wonderland. That one time frequent, so coveted, blush has nearly gone, a virtue seemingly never to be recovered. Dame rumor has whispered it may even have been this which caused the downfall. His recent strayings are far from his once trodden paths.

But in seriousness, he may most fairly be judged as one who "builds his dislikes of straw and his friendships of oak."

OUT of the land of golden sunshine and hot tomatoes to the land of snow, ice, and beer, came our little "Ralphie." Coming as he did from a coeducational college, it took "Cal" some time to acclimate himself to the freedom of a purely masculine institution. However, after three months of continuous instruction from "Bob" Young, "Cal" managed to hit all of his biggest "X's" in fine shape, much to the bewilderment of all concerned.

More through fate than planning, "Cal" came to Lehigh, and although he has never ceased to love his original Alma Mater, the University of California, he now considers himself a true son of Lehigh.

Because of his surplus pep and wonderful disposition, "Cal" is always in demand, and no party is complete without him. His winning smile and easy-going, happy-go-lucky personality have won him many staunch friends during his sojourn here at Lehigh.

The characteristics that make "Cal" so well liked in college are bound to carry him a long way in the world. Here's to the success we know you will attain, "Cal"!

IN THE year of our Lord 1923, a world-weary, super-sophisticated, curly-headed young man from the big city arrived at Bethlehem's then architectural gem, the Lehigh Valley depot. Contrary to his own convictions, he was gleefully informed by the natives that he was still in the United States, in spite of the fact that he had already crossed the Hudson. Having thus recklessly ventured into foreign territory, he has with his usual blasé air, calmly adapted himself to Bethlehem's sundry attractions, and has in the course of four years reached a stage where he can think of his former haunts with scarcely a sigh. In spite of four strenuous years, he has managed every winter to subtract some time which might be more pleasantly devoted to perfecting his talents upon the basketball court. "Herb" is so attached to the college life by this time that he can not bear to think of ceasing so soon to be a student. He therefore plans to continue his studies through three years of law school.

BIG "Reds" is well red in hair, well red in looks, and always red hot in sports. Without a doubt he is one of the greatest soccer men ever produced at Lehigh. "Bud's" individual playing saved many a game for old Lehigh. "Bud" could also throw a baseball just as well as kick a soccer ball. To be truthful "Bud" has a pegging arm, and also a peg leg. He tells us that he hits four hundred, but to be truthful, it is only three hundred ninety-eight. But he sure did sock two nice ones at Lafayette.

The big trouble with "Bud" is his arbitral character. Just the other day we were talking about Notre Dame, and "Bud" butts in half peeved because we were talking about his girl.

"Bud" is specializing in history and just the other day he wanted to know if Macon, Georgia was a hard job.

Big boy, if you kick and fight as well in life as you've done on the soccer field and diamond, you surely will be a high scorer.

"TONY" is quite a boy—foolish looking and simple as the duce, but there is something big there. He'll fool you all some day. A harder and more conscientious worker can't be found. We all take our hats off to "Tony," for he has wended his way through college against big odds. His innermost feelings and expressions are never shown. Trials and tribulations are shared by himself alone, and that is why we know him as the jolly, kidding fellow that he is. He has worked his entire way through school and tried his hand at many a job. As an instructor in violin in a conservatory he has surely credited himself, likewise, scholastically at Lehigh. Adept on the track and at baseball, he has shown a bit of prowess at both, but has devoted his time primarily to studies in his chosen chemistry.

Neddie has inherited that unassuming, dignified, and honest bearing for which we so admire him and respect him for real honest-to-goodness counsel.

"NICK" is one of those Pennsylvanians (in this case a product of Dunmore) who might have "done more" to prepare for life's voyage than to set his course up the River Lehigh. Getting past the bursar was one of his earliest and most notable accomplishments and this evidently enabled him to matriculate. He might have become a sensation on the gridiron were it not for the fact that he never handled a football. "Nick" is attempting to add a degree to his name and is having a "hot" time doing so. Incidentally, home-talented girls are giving him worthy assistance in this extracurricular activity. He has chosen the electrical course in the hope of sometime "shocking" the world with his achievements. All in all "Nick's" a pretty good skate, but performs best off the ice.

THEY generally come out of the West, sturdy, broad-shouldered, with blonde hair and chaff behind their ears, eager to learn and to help enlighten—so broad-minded. But "Noro" left LaCrosse with sharpened wit and a taste for sarcasm which won him friendships. He espied the link motion on a locomotive while enroute east, and his head turned to mechanics, whereupon he excelled in studious delight to win his freshman honors. As we all expected, he blossomed forth, and paid his tribute to old Lehigh. Devoted in every attempt to many forms of activity, he even scrimmaged against the varsity to help develop a team that would beat Lafayette—and won that last game on the night before it happened. The summer vacations were a source of delight, devoted to foreign visits, or by the side of his hunky friends in the shops of the Bethlehem Steel.

And now, having demonstrated his worth in America, "Noro" intends to go to Russia, away from the political atmosphere which has enhanced his student environment.

The only thing wrong with "Bud" is that he's too strong. But his parents are firm believers in the merits of Lebanon bologna and consequently his great strength is not to be wondered at.

Besides making every worthwhile college honor to be made, "Bud" didn't accomplish much at Lehigh. He was a faithful football scrub for three years and his absolute fearlessness won him a place on the lacrosse team.

As president of Arcadia and an opponent of Dr. Richards in matters of policy, we are shown another side, that of the statesman.

Being a keen student of feminine psychology, he delves deeply into the intricacies of the feminine mind and emerges less puzzled than most men.

It is very safe to say that "Bud" has fewer enemies and more friends than any one we know. He has been honored with responsible positions and he has discharged them ably and creditably.

"The nuts, kid?" "Oh, yeah."

PATRICK J. O'LEARY

"Pat" "P. J."

C. E., Theta Kappa Phi

"PAT" transferred to Lehigh at the beginning of his junior year with visions of becoming the master mind in engineering, but when he realized that all civils have the same idea, he turned to a humorist of distinction. The enormous demand for O'Leary's "wise cracks" has not in any way interfered with the constant production or the slightly used stock.

When "Pat" reaches his goal as civil engineer, the Bethlehem pike will be rechristened "Midnight Boulevard" to commemorate the time when the famous O'Leary did most of his commuting to Philadelphia, while attending classes at Lehigh.

"Pat" will be the pride of any employer who stands for firm judgment and dependable opinions. Criticisms are never successfully put across in his presence, unless he agrees with sufficient proof to back his statements. Now that we realize he has the ability to place himself where his ambitions are leading him, we wish him the best of luck and a big celebration when he arrives at Waterbury.

WHEN "Ozzie" arrived from Arlington, N. J., he had ambitions. With his first introduction he was tooting his own horn, and the sweet sounds from the old trumpet just won our hearts. When he plays, the girls gaze with rapt expressions and after the number you can hear them whisper, "Isn't he just wonderful?" Being a man for the public eye, "Ozzie" didn't pass unnoticed. With a red excited face under wild Swedish waves, "Ozzie" could repeatedly be counted on to step into the breach and drag the whole Lehigh stands to their feet when the team needed support for a necessary score. Varied and deep have been his "affairs de coeur." In fact, you might say that he has run the whole gauntlet of human emotions. The boys call him a prince,—the girls whisper something that sounds like "Great God," or maybe it's Greek.

THIS young man hails from the vicinity of the "City of Brotherly Love" and he certainly looks the part. Of a genial and sunny disposition, "Russ" has acquired a host of friends in his three years at Lehigh, and at the same time has found time to put considerable of his efforts on his studies, for which he received the coveted honor of being elected to Tau Beta Pi. However, don't get the idea that "Russ" is a bookworm because he really and truthfully is not. Any afternoon during lacrosse season you may see "Russ" out on the field acquiring the skill that that sport requires. Likewise, any night on which there is a scheduled "shin-dig" on the campus and off (mostly off) you may see "Russ" strutting his stuff in the well-known terpsichorean art. To sum up such a person as "Russ" in a few words, one might venture to say he is a well-rounded fellow, and one whom any one might be proud to be called his friend.

As "Bill" was scanning Bethlehem's horizon for the first time, he espied some pigeons perched on the roof of the station. He was innocently counting them for lack of something better to do when a cop tapped him on the shoulder and told him that it was against the law to count pigeons. "Bill" said, "Oh, iss dot so?" whereupon he was informed that he'd have to pay a dollar for each one he counted. "Bill" paid ten dollars and—he always delights in telling to this day the cop doesn't know he counted twenty-four pigeons.

Well, anyway, that's how we started to call him "Pigeon" or "Pidge" for short. He is a notorious character around college and holds the prize for being the easiest going person we know. He worries about nothing, takes everything as it comes, and doesn't know the meaning of the word trouble.

"Pidge" says that he likes his afternoon chem lals and movie lals so well that he'd like to stay around another year. We hope he does.

"Bob" Peary, alias "Rufus," the knight of the red beard, is a man with a dark and mysterious past. "One at a time, girls, don't crowd—line forms on the right!" Where he came from, or why, is of no consequence. Suffice it to say that one bright morning we found him among us. He toiled not, neither did he spin, yet Solomon in all his glory, would have envied "Bob's" mustache. He was the despair and the goal of all present, past and future classes. The sheiks of the campus tried everything from farmer germ to Christian Science, to bring the frail moss on their upper lips into a state of sturdy foilage such as was his. All in vain, and to this day Rufus has the only "he-man" mustache in L. U. He made a voyage to Greenland, and every walrus and seal that saw him died of sheer envy. He was the Beau Brummel of the Arctic. It is recorded that he fought and killed three polar bears with his bare fist.

NEW JERSEY once claimed this big "heman," but gave him up to Lehigh. The famous team of Pease and Fountain was soon formed and made things hum in this neck of the woods. However, his love of things wild and wooly soon drew him westward where he romped the plains of Arizona with the cattle and coyotes. After bulldogging steers and actresses between Prescott and Hollywood, he packed his chaps and six-gun and pointed east again to pursue the bigger and better things at Lehigh. One of Bethlehem's fairest daughters proved his incentive and attraction, and he has now "done got hisself engaged," and we're all looking forward to the big time when Fred Trafford ties the knot in the Lehigh chapel. Best luck to you, "General"—when you leave we'll all say, "There goes a MAN!"

After sailing through the hometown high school with flying colors, he looked around for more worlds to conquer and he picked on Lehigh.

Since coming to Lehigh, "Lil" has become expert on his banjo and incidentally picked up quite a bit of knowledge about electrical engineering.

The future is all before him, and knowing "Lil's" ability, his multitude of friends don't hesitate to predict big things for him. His faithfulness to duty and willingness to work will be big assets to him in his struggle with life.

HERE's this fellow "Sod" Phillips, who hails from Reading, Pa., and has been pursuing certain studies concerning electrical engineering. Along with this line of intellectual endeavor, "Sod" has also found time for his banjo and certain of the fair sex. He has made many electrical trips very enjoyable by hitting up time on his banjo, guitar and other stringed instruments. But throughout these past four years at Lehigh "Sod" has been making friends, not by any flashy feats, but on the basis of good-fellowship that makes real true friends. On the books enough, out enough, he is now ready to go—we don't know where or when, but we have a good idea how. Just take out the old banjo and put on that smile and you will be fixed. Best of luck wherever you go and come back soon!

THERE have been intellectual giants in this cosmopolitan institution, outstanding leaders have waxed and waned, but few men have been privileged to imbibe so freely at the fountain of a liberal education as our adamant friend Phillips. Scholastic difficulties have been surmounted with indomitable persistence and yet he has ever been a patron of the arts of Bacchus.

"Iron" entered Lehigh's portals in 1922 full of high ideals and aspirations and supremely confident in his veridancy that college was merely another world to conquer, but what sad disillusion greeted him during his sophomore year. Being of a reticent temperament, it has taken many of us considerable time until his true qualities became apparent, but once a friend of "Phil's," always a friend, has been the experience of all his associates. He has ever been fair and square, ready for a fight or frolic and has gone through many struggles scholastic and otherwise with a head "bloody but unbowed."

"Ike" decided that a course in electrical engineering at Lehigh was "the thing" and "the place." Peckville lost one of her sons and we gained a classmate whom we are proud to know.

Pierce's optimism and wholesome fun-making have put many bright spots in his college career, and has helped many of us across the bumps. Many of the boys probably remember "Ike's" famous "Slide from Bill Hall to the Physics Building." Everything went fine until his feet could no longer keep up the pace and he piled into a snow drift.

"Ike" has had sessions with the books and has been successful with his scholastic work. This biography would not be complete without reference to the effect of his magnetic personality on the fair sex. Confidentially, it has been necessary for him to have the phone removed.

Pierce's energetic disposition should go far in making him a place in the field of electrical engineering.

"Reg" "REGGIE"

B. A.; Varsity Football (4), Squad (3); Varsity Baseball (3, 4); Freshman Baseball Team; Varsity Wrestling (2); Freshman Wrestling Team; Varsity Tennis Squad (1); American Chemical Society; Chemical Society; Sigma Phi Epsilon

"Reg" has probably told you that he is from Hanover, Pa., because you may have heard him speak of that city's famous shoes and shoe findings. At any rate, from that metropolis and Mercersburg Academy, Lehigh claimed an ambitious young man bent on a chemical education. However, after some study in this line, "Reg" displayed a higher genius to be a business man than an engineer.

We know "Reg" will settle down some day, but to look at his address book we don't know just which town in the United States he intends to favor.

With a clever, smiling, "happy-go-lucky" disposition and a stunning roadster, he has waged war on many a campus; Cedar Crest, B'thorpe and Fem Sem falling before the onslaught.

Because of his ability to achieve success in his undertakings, we suspect that he will be riding the financial sea as a captain of industry some day.

SEVERAL years ago, "Perce" wandered into Bethlehem with the intention of becoming a mechanical engineer, but soon discovered that he would never become very efficient as a boiler stoker. After a vacation with the U. S. G. S., he decided to come back as a miner and tell them how they make maps on the survey.

Despite his prolonged stay, we feel sure that his time was well spent in both the executive and business management of the Mustard and Cheese Club. "Deac" did a great deal toward establishing and maintaining the splendid reputation our dramatic clubs now enjoy.

After "Perce" is graduated and when he goes into the wilds of South America to work his gold mine, we know that he is going to have loads of success.

AFTER hearing "Al" talk of his birthplace, namely, Baltimore, Md., one would expect a city beautiful, but who can tell. When "Al" came to Lehigh the local boys predicted a bright future for him in athletics. In order that they should not be disappointed, "Al" proceeded to make good immediately in almost everything he went out for and added lustre to Lehigh's glorious name.

As a student—well, "Al" is a good business man whatever that may mean. However, he has triumphed over all obstacles that have arisen in his path thus far, and is gathering momentum to carry him to the peak of life's attainment.

His ability as a "song and dance man" is surpassed only by his propensity to practice at any and all times. Still the opinion is prevalent that if "Al" will divert the energy expended in scintillating among the fair sex to more serious pursuits he will undoubtedly live to be a financial wizard.

CAPTAIN Cook got himself into an awful jam when he claimed that he found the North Pole, but recently the world has come to realize that the old faker was not entirely a fraud, for it is a well-known fact that he discovered Ogdensburg, N. Y. Soon after that momentous discovery the fame of Lehigh traveled north and Merritt sent in his application, although he was a pretty nice chap at the time.

The boys soon discovered that his Polar origin didn't mean that he was a terrible frost, so they promptly began to initiate him into the mysteries of "Beslem." But he fooled 'em! He has remained pure and sweet even to this day.

He's a social lion of the first water, and young girls have been known to cry upon hearing that Merritt wouldn't be at the house-party. And, oh, yes, we must not forget to mention that this young man, so popular with the weaker sex, is going back to Ogdensburg to educate the natives.

"JIMMY," as every one knows him, came to Lehigh from Liberty High. In high school James was quite an athlete, excelling in both football and track. Just for a little diversion he took up wrestling and soccer at Lehigh and no one disputes his ability in such sports. "Jimmy" is a little fellow, but a bad one to meet in a dark alley on a misty night, for he surely can handle his arms and legs.

"Jimmy" doesn't say much about girls and "star-gazing"—but he has one good habit, and that is showing the roof to many of the supposedly stronger sex, who then become full-fledged astronomers.

Wherever you go you always find "Jim" smiling and full of "pep," which makes him so well liked.

Lehigh will certainly miss "Jimmy," and we all wish him a very pleasant and successful journey on the road to success.

With a sense of humor such as his, nothing is impossible. He registered as Reinsmith Carlton, in his junior year. He fooled the profs, but the boys were wise.

Carlton is quite proficient in the use of modern Pennsylvania dutch. We heard quite a few toneful discussions between him and "Peggy."

We expect great things from our Emaus friend. He might write a bigger and better dutch yell.

We hear he is taking a night course in "Sweet worded English conversation." The boys who saw his "teacher" up at the Lake don't blame him.

Undoubtedly his future lies in paint. He is quite an authority on the subject. But you can't tell by the appearance of his flivver.

At an early age he showed an aptitude toward digging in the earth, and is now prepared to produce more soot for the Smoky City or perhaps gold for the treasury. At any rate, he intends to hide himself away in a dark tunnel. Such a pity; a man as handsome as this should be placed out of sight!

"Bob" is well known about the campus from his participation in college affairs. In his freshman year he received a letter for swimming. Since then he has received no end of letters from the Dean. From this it is seen that "Bob" has done well in many of the extra-curricula activities.

Through his four years at Lehigh, "Bob" has won many friends who have no doubt that he will be named with the men of Lehigh who have achieved a real purpose in their lives.

FOUR years ago "Gord" decided to leave the gay social whirl of the capital and join our quiet life up here. But quiet life—that was not to be. In a comparatively short time he became one of the most popular and highest leaders in college activities. He also played "leading man" in the show, and copped the presidency of the Intercollegiate Newspaper Association—the first Lehigh man to ever hold an office in it.

"Gord" really did have other interests besides "activities." In fact, between trips up north one year, and down to "Philly" the next to see some fair one, it proved quite hard to keep up in everything. However, the four years are over and he leaves for—well, we can't predict the heights. Good luck, old lad!

"JIMMIE" came to Lehigh after a colorful career at that worthy institution known as Baltimore Polytechnic Institute. He used his good judgment and decided to struggle among the amperes and the volts, in due time becoming permanently magnetized, or rather, hypnotized, by the talent of the electrical engineering department.

As an entertainer, his fame was assured after that night when he delighted a picked audience with the story of his father's exploits among the buffaloes in his home town. Since then he has shot the bull frequently.

"Jimmie" was always willing to give us a lift (and as often needed lifting himself), was just a good fellow, happy, ready always for a good time, and yet conscientious with it all. If these traits continue in the future as they have grown in the past, we feel safe in predicting a rosy future for him.

FOUR years ago, Milton came up from Bethlehem High, announced his arrival and remained to serve. His first impression on the campus was that the Library was a railroad roundhouse, and it required great efforts on the part of an instructor to convince him otherwise. But he has lived and learned. "Milt" once had the idea that he was a cross-country runner, but fortunately he stubbed his toe and saved the school a good deal of trouble. "Milt" tries to convince us he is a woman-hater, then why is it his ambition to have the "Reading" run an early morning train each Monday from Reading? We're sure he does not live there. The two facts do not coincide, "Milt." Try something else.

He has been a hard worker all through his four years, rooted for Lehigh's team against Lafayette, all in vain; but hopes to see the day, provided it isn't more than one hundred years away, when Lehigh will win.

"CHINK" comes from a happy little household that migrates spasmodically from Philadelphia to Southampton. "Chink" has accomplished the remarkable feat of completing his course at Lehigh in the specified four years. He is an ardent lover of nature, as evidenced by his long hikes (usually terminating in Philadelphia or Bethayres, as the season changes). And all that know the fair lady readily agree that the time was well spent.

Each year saw "Chink" strutting his stuff more or less on the baseball diamond for the sake of his dear old Alma Mater.

He gained the unique position of official representative of Lehigh at Tunney's training camp at Stroudsburg.

However, "Chink" possesses the cheeriest of dispositions and the readiest of smiles that can't help but make him liked by everybody. We will all miss him.

FOUR long years ago, there came to Lehigh a quiet little fellow, named Robinson, from the large and prosperous metropolis of Millville. Little did one think that in a few years, this quiet boy, noted for his smooth complexion, would become such a handsome brute. "What a whale of a difference a few years make." Now, the only thing that is smoother than his complexion is his well developed "line."

How can any one be so popular with the fair sex and still keep up in his work? Ask "Robbie," he knows. During his four years at Lehigh he has learned how to combine these two great assets without suffering any disastrous results. Will you let us in on the secret, "Robbie"?

"Robbie" has made many lasting friends while at college and his friendship is valued and highly appreciated by all those who really know him. We are all sure that this alone speaks for itself.

"TOMMY" decided to make the most of his college days by getting out and meeting people, and doing things, and as a side issue, try to assimilate the knowledge that Mr. Lehigh doles out.

So "Tom" planned a comprehensive education. He divided his time among studies, college and social activities. "Tommy's" collegiate interest is evidenced by his various activities around the campus. His social training has not been overlooked either. His smooth flowing red hair and rolling (?) blue eyes are sure to be seen at any big social function, whether it be on the campus or within a radius of ten miles. In fact, some of the better places in town are treating him as a regular guest.

Thus we find that our "Tommy" has developed his all-round qualities while at college. And we are sure that "Tom" will be a son our Alma Mater can well be proud of.

REES was born and raised in Wilkes-Barre. He came to Lehigh with the earnest idea of being a chemical engineer, but in his junior year changed to straight chemistry.

He started off with a bang and cracked the chemistry courses wide open. Since then he has moved steadily along, usually being on the right side of the passing grade by .001.

During his sojourn at Lehigh, Roderick developed a mania for sleep which became so prevalent that it was hard to find him anywhere except in bed, and if found elsewhere the chances are that he was dozing. He has reformed now and his spare time is spent studying, and at night one can see him treading the beaten path to the other side of the river.

Rees has made many friends because of his likeable personality, and we wish him success in the field of chemistry.

WHENEVER any one wants to get the real "dope" on any question, ranging from baseball statistics to the eternal woman problem, "Jimmie" is the man to be questioned; for "Jimmie" is deeply versed in experience and what he can't explain, especially in regard to girls, isn't worth listening to. He has, moreover, the real ability to couch his opinions in no uncertain terms. "Jimmie's" outstanding distinctions is that he decided to cross the Mason and Dixon line in Lehigh's favor. That in itself indicates his spirit of "up and at 'em," and the fruits thereof are numerous. For "Jimmie" has left nothing out—no, not even the song! His base voice has boomed forth on many occasions. Though "Jimmie" is known to oppose anything "high hat," yet he can take a man's part in any shindig." His unfailing good humor and his ready help foretell success.

LIKE a true king, Louis has his hobbies. As Louis the Fourteenth looked to his horses and his women, our Louis looks to his car and to his billiards. His greatest virtue is generosity—his greatest evil languishness. As an athlete our Louis would not aid in blazoning the name of Lehigh across the sky, but as a student, no greater asset could be asked for, unless it be a Steinmetz or a Sinclair.

In 1923, the gates of Lehigh opened, that a young king, "Louis, the Innocent," might enter, and now with much sadness she opens her gates again, that a young king, "Louis the Worthy," learned in the art of living, cultured in the ways of life, and skilled the theory of business, might depart. Once again, Lehigh has sent forth into the unknown a representative of her criteria, a gentleman king, Louis Henry Sasse.

Due to the fact that "our Sam" had tooted a "mean" saxophone before coming to Lehigh, his natural inclination led him to join the University Band. There he proceeded to toot, to such good effect that in his sophomore year he was made drum major, in which position he abandoned his "sax" for a strut that any army drum major would envy.

Not that "Sam's" activities were restricted to a musical sphere. No! No! We find him in his sophomore year on the Sophomore Cabinet, helping guide the footsteps of erring frosh. As secretary of the Radio Society in his first and second years he earned the position of vice-president of this society to which he was elected in his last year.

ALTHOUGH Earl is a product of a coal-heaving town, he claims that he would rather clean streets. This broad-mindedness is probably the reason for his excessive heavy "drag" about town.

While at Lehigh, he has garnered sundry laurels. Due to the fact that he doesn't play football, the gridders did not elect him captain last year. Not being musically inclined, Earl refrained from Glee Club competition for the sake of old Lehigh. However, at basketball his lithe sinuous body stood him in good stead. He has been affectionately termed "The Pollock" due to his distinctly Swedish features.

All in all, however, Earl's heart is as big as his feet. He'd give either one of his shirts to a friend upon sufficient security. And so it goes, all good things must end—we must part with Earl.

Our hero's virtues can best be summarized in the statement that he is a student par excellence and basketball player extraordinary. "Moe's" chief recreations here during the last four years have been hitting all Stoughton's metallurgy courses for goals in the classroom, and tossing leather sphere through the strings for goals on the basketball court.

In a more serious vein, "Moe" is a fine chap, a credit to Lehigh, and we confidentially expect him to continue achieving goals in the business world.

Thus Danville lost one of its leading citizens. Being a chemist "Sam" has had to hit the books pretty regularly. However, it hasn't been all work and no play. Over the week-ends is when our hero shone brilliantly. Not that he had given much time to the weaker sex—for he insists that the home town product is the best—but get a crowd of men together and "The Hun" is in his prime. It has been said that he knows Bethlehem better than any one in college, and from observation we cannot deny it.

"Tiny", by the way, has one vice, folks—he doesn't imbibe. In fact, the only thing with a "shine on" on "Tiny" is his trousers.

However, Roy is loyal to Bethlehem in spite of the honest endeavor the fellows have spent in trying to convince him of his lack of discretion. He also claims that "Bethlehem gives a guy more opportunity to increase his "balting" average than the Yanks give Babe Ruth.

Not only has "Tiny" succeeded in proving that he is an excellent scholar by setting forth new theories in various studies and flagrantly disputing the learned profs on sundry articles, but he has held down a position on the football squad or team since his entrance here. Best of luck, "Tiny."

"Ice's" chief reason for leaving Cincinnati University was that he found to his chagrin that Cincinnati was lacking in brick-topped girls. Red-haired women are "Ice's" weakness. That is his story and he sticks to it, although we doubt it at times—too numerous to mention.

"Ice" is always busy. At least, he thinks he is. Every evening he has some work to do, and can't possibly go out, but the next morning he still has the work to do. "Ice" is very studious at times. It seems to run in streaks, pin stripes to be precise.

"Ice's" future seems to lie in steel. Even now he is building castles in Spain, but they are of steel, rather than the traditional stone and mortar. We feel sure he will "bridge" his way to success in the world of men, steel and red-haired women.

IN ORDER to clearly portray "Ed," it is first necessary to state that he is a resident of Bath, Pa. Upon graduation from Bethlehem High School, either heredity, environment or some other indeterminable cause impelled him to follow the footsteps of his father, namely, the medical profession. His natural aptitude for this study soon brought him into recognition as a leading member in premedical circles at Lehigh, but his interests were not limited to that field alone. Psychology intrigued him and it is reported that he was the only student able to converse on an equal plane with "Bosey" on this subject. Psychology also led him into an intense study of the night-life of Bethlehem and its effects upon the inhabitants; chemistry drew him into the study of alcoholic beverages; philosophy opened many paths of reflection study for him, such as the definition of the nature of true love. In fact, his devotion to these studies was so thorough, that he often neglected to go to bed early.

"Nat" has gained great fame throughout the Lehigh Valley by his "off-again, on-again" mustache. He acquired the hair-growing habit after seeing Adolph Menjou. "Nat's" biggest fault is that he is an avowed womanhater—that is, to those who refuse to know him.

However, one forgets all cares and all woes when "Nat" starts running his nimble fingers over the keyboard of a piano. He is also a composer "par excellence," as those who saw the Mustard and Cheese show of 1926 will attest.

The mining course has resurrected many a proverbial student. Even "Fan" was aroused, and established himself as a man of affairs on the campus. With a conscientious effort, aided by a pleasing personality, "Fan" etched his name on the roll of active men. Carrying mats until he became manager of wrestling attributed to his worthiness. At the intercollegiates at Penn State, "Fan" was elected president of their Association. "Bosey's" report of the first meeting over which Paul presided, stated: "The president was quiet and unassuming" as the constitution was revised. This last bears the essence of diplomacy. If his four years at Lehigh have nothing else for him, they certainly have improved his bridge to a point of par-excellence. Incidentally, the old adage doesn't seem to hold true in his case, for his address book is more than filled with a wide variety of "she-male" names. We fear the poor fellow will be too old to experience the nuptial state by the time he gets 'em all sorted out and chooses the so-called "one and only." In this connection, we might mention that approximately fifty per cent. of the men in college have invested in Lehigh Valley Transit Company stock on the strength of "Mel's" cash business on the Easton Limited.

AFTER spending a year at Mr. Deni-son's college for white boys and girls,
"Ced" entered Lehigh, considering himself fully prepared for the big step. Since that time, four years ago, he has distinguished himself in many fields. Whether a student, basketball star, hurdler, songster, or any one of a variety of other types is called for, "Ced" can fill the position.

Since the opening of college, "Ced" has indulged his senior privilege by periodically appearing about the campus with what resembles a mustache, which does not fail to impress the men he commands as a lieutenant in the R. O. T. C.

Although Mr. "Psyndic" is sure of graduating with very creditable grades, he assures us that he is still uneducated, so he intends to start all over again next year when he enters the graduate business school of that institution that was one of the big three; namely, Harvard. We expect to hear of further honors to his name and infinitum.

ROBERT SPARKS was born in Maine and soon moved to Massachusetts. The last fifteen years he lived in New York.
He went to Saint Paul's School when he was twelve and stayed there until he graduated in 1922.

At school he did not go out for athletics, but played the cornet in the school orchestra. After his freshman year he was ill and out one year. Every chance he gets he goes down to Maine to the back woods.

"Sparkie" has been studying electrical engineering here so that there is some chance that he will go back and tell those folks about electric lights.

YEP, this is "Pop." "Pop" hails from Pennsylvania and a farm, and can tell all about the intricacies of a tractor, binder or plow.

"Pop" is the well-known inventor of an alternating current storage battery. The only thing the matter with it is that you can't store anything in it. Besides that, it's all right.

"Pop" really deserves that name, for he was married two years before he went to "prep" school—but that didn't hurt him any. He has a motorcycle and almost any time his "roaring hyena" can be heard packing the dirt around the campus.

"SPILLY" has long since proven to us that he is the most accurate and practical man in his course and every one rushes to get Emil as a laboratory partner. For correct dope he simply can't be beat.

Football is "Spill's" favorite pastime, but he had to be content to watch the game from the stands because Wendell disagreed with "Bill" Roper upon the value of a pony backfield.

Emil is quite an active Allen-Lehigh man. No banquet was quite an assured success until every member was quite convinced our Emil would be present. His melodious (?) tenor voice led every clubmate in choral festivities until he was simply sat upon.

"Spill" is a great metallurgist and ten years from now we figure at least seven of we ten mets will rap at the door marked "President" and enter seeking a position from our old classmate.

We know that it won't take ten years for you to become a success, comrade, and we're back of you all the time.

ON A September morning, four years ago, "Al" migrated from Pottsville, took the usual oath of office, and became one of us. It was not long before he was making history with "the books" and getting a working knowledge of the town. Eventful sophomore and junior years followed with the accumulation of many friends.

Outside of college "Al's" friends were decidedly not all men. This comes through his ability to cut a mean figure to the tunes of jazz and resulted in his catching the last car from Allentown.

At the end of his junior year Tau Beta Pi and Eta Kappa Nu claimed him and as a senior he presided over the meetings of the Electrical Society.

"Al's" personality and knowledge of the subject should go far in making him a successful engineer, and as a classmate, one we will all remember.

AFTER shopping around at some length among the better-known colleges of the east, Warren decided that since Lehigh would have him, he might as well make it his bachelor hall. "Bachelor" is used advisedly, for among his arts, misogynism heads the list, and his science in dodging the deadlier of the species is unparalleled. Perhaps it is only that Warren is discriminating, for all those letters can't be from home and mother.

Warren emerged from his shell in odd moments to rattle off cracks for the Burr and mislead the instructors in the virtue of one Warren Stoltz. And it worked: that prosperous air, fostered by the studied effect of a good nickel cigar, made the impression that earned the good old B. A.

Stoltz wants a new racket, so if the reader knows a good, reliable way to grab the world by the tail, please address the above.

FOUR years in the cold and cruel world between high school and college made a worker of Paul. He knows what he's after and we believe that he'll get it. We were not surprised to see him make Tau Beta.

Previous to the summer camp at Saylor's Lake, we thought he was immune to feminine charms—we know better now. His sense of humor reached a climax in last year's girls' number of the Burr. Miss P. G. sure had a wicked line.

Paul was out for Glee Club in his freshman year, the next year the club was much better. If any one knew how to do something, it was usually "Peegee." In spite of this fact, he was always ready to help the other fellow.

We expect great things from "Peegee"; we will probably drop into his office some day and ask, "Hey! Howinell do you do this, 'Peegee'?"

"Cripe! You ought to know that!"

THERE lived in Newark, N. J., a little boy who wanted to be a sailor, but one day a man came to the house and advised that our "Mickey" was in no shape to go to school for at least two weeks. This so impressed the young lad that he wanted to know what manner of man could perform such miracles. Upon finding out that the visitor was a doctor all thoughts of the sea were forgotten, except for pleasure, possibly, and "Rudy" decided to follow the medical profession. To do this he realized that he must have a liberal education, so a fiddle and a football were procured, and "Mickey" was enrolled in Barringer High, where he attained great fame, graduating with the titles of fourth violin in the varsity orchestra and chief snapper-back on the team. After resting at Villanova a year he came to Lehigh as a pre-med and took up chemistry. Always a student he had wondered how music would affect chemical reactions, so with immortal genius he tackled the problem. At first his work was not appreciated, but he finally convinced the faculty that electrons and atoms had nothing to do with chemistry.

OUR esteemed classmate, George Henry Toadvine, Jr., joined the multitude of future Lehigh men during April, 1905. Nature endowed him with a manly physique. As he grew and came of age he had expanded—upwards to six feet three inches.

Frequent trips to Philadelphia to see two interesting girls broke the monotony of George's college days.

Incidentally, nature supplied "Toady" with a theological mind and, as with most theological minds, there is a difficulty involved for any one who attempts to stir "Greek" from his orthodox views on life as it should be according to religion—not as it is by truth.

"Toady" has been close to the breast of old South Mountain (his feet—if not his head) for his four bright college years, despite the "ology" courses. George has chosen the ministry as his profession, and our heartiest wishes for success accompany him.

A tennis player of no mean ability, he has a great future ahead of him in that, if he so desires. During his leisure moments, music hath its charms, all of which led to the musical clubs.

Then, there is always Camp Meade, that pleasant oasis situated in Maryland. "Al" tells us nothing of the work, only Washington, and in that flivver too. As to the unfair sex, well, no one in particular and many in general, ranging all over the U. S. as near as we have been able to find out.

Taking all in all, "Al's" years here have been a success. He has wrought pleasure to all who have been fortunate enough to have known him, and he is a friend of the type upon whom one may always depend.

JUST a little over twenty years ago, Jersey City was honored by the birth of a Lehigh student. However, "Nat" spent his high school days in Ridgewood, where he entered in a promising dramatic career. He entered Lehigh at an innocent age, full of conscientious endeavors for success as a chemical engineer. But, alas, the ladies just couldn't leave him alone, and the lure of the lookout on a moonlit night was too great, or perhaps numerous trips to Philadelphia may explain the difficulty he found in studying.

The quality of his voice brought him into the Glee Club and his fascination for loud sounds led him still further into the ordnance corps.

It is rumored that of late a certain young lady of his home town has supplanted entirely the heterogeneous varieties which once were the subject of his day dreams.

It will be with real sadness that we will say "good-bye" for the last time to "Nat" and wish him the very best of good fortune always.

"UBIE" came to Lehigh from Canton, Ohio, to see if he could become a metallurgist. After four years of hard study he sees at least a glimmer of hope of his ambition becoming a reality, for he is one of the few struggling mets that have stuck the limit.

Around the campus, "Don" is well known, and also well liked. He is everybody's friend, and is always ready to give a helping hand. This hand helps, too, especially if one is in need of a date and doesn't know where to get it, for "Ubie's" list is inexhaustible, and he is very generous with it.

We all wish "Don" the best of luck after he gets his diploma, and are confident that he will make a big success of his chosen work.

IN THE fall of 1923 this energetic chap, for some unknown reason, matriculated at Lehigh. His four years' sojourn at the University has meant nothing more than an attempted determination, with incidental study, to solve the cause of this fatal step. But, being a local boy, he has made a determined fight in his assiduous pursuit of his studies. "Mitch" is such a conscientious fellow that he feels too modest to "bluff" his way with the result that on one occasion a margin of an 'nth degree has kept him in college. In all sincerity, however, "Mitch's" open frankness as to his knowledge or lack of knowledge of a subject has become a virtue.

We feel certain that this desire to become a lawyer will some day materialize. We would suggest, however, that in the meantime he give up his too frequent "dating" habit.

As "Winks" hopped off the train, September, 1925, his first thought was, "What a hell of a town this is"—and he hadn't seen the hill-to-hill bridge either! He was about to go back "over the hills to Virginia" when his trusty roommate of "prep" school fame dragged him to Taylor Hall. In a few days, however, "Winks" became reconciled to the town.

The "Wharf-rat" was a real soldier boy, having gone to the Shenandoah Valley Academy and being an ex-'26 man from V. M. I. Neglecting his boy scout credit, he was elected to the Scabbard and Blade during his first year at Lehigh and was a satellite on the rifle team.

"Two-Bits" favorite beverage, besides coca-cola, is beer. He was not Don Juan's roommate, hence he was, for a while, somewhat ill at ease at the church meetings. After making a few visits to Fem Sem, though, he became a ladies' man.

When a boy, he always loved to see the birds fly, and this longing became manifest in his later ambition to become an aviator. (The highest he ever went up was in a roller coaster!)

CLAP hands, here comes "Charlie." A brilliant flash of color moves up the campus. Profs shade their eyes, seniors turn inquiringly, sophs rush to the scene. C. F. Wolborn, '27, in full regalia, is entering Lehigh for the first time. Since his freshman year, "Charlie's" raiment has been somewhat dimmed, not that he was kidded about it, for no one ever tried that and got away with it. By this we don't mean to infer that he was a bruiser; in fact, his principal avocations were bridge and the fair sex.

The military has always had an irresistible fascination for the ladies. None knew this better than "Charlie," therefore we find him spending many hours on the drill field, inculcating first principles into willing, if obtuse, freshmen.

In the beginning of his senior year, athletic aspirations seized upon him so that he transferred his wrestling to the gym and his conquest from the weak sex to the stronger was commendable.

Knowing "Charlie" as we do, we are sure his life will prove brilliant, full and praiseworthy.

FOUR years ago no one could have foreseen the heights which "Row" would eventually attain. But time flies and the mind behind the sublime countenance pictured above is now the master force in the butter-and-egg industry, the largest non-fraternal organization in the world. The active interest which he has taken in this business can be easily surmised by noticing the samples which he carries on his ties and stiff shirts.

But four years have not been wasted for "Row." Entering Lehigh with ideals of the highest and ambitions of the broadest, he has retained his ideals and fulfilled his ambitions. In fact, celerity is one of his outstanding characteristics. So great did his outside activities beset him, that he was compelled to make numerous week-end trips to see about business. We wonder how business is.

Nothing has been said about his achievements or ability, but if he continues in the future as successfully as in the past, he will undoubtedly reach the hall of fame.

How to get through college with a minimum of work and a maximum of good times, is a paradox that only "Bunny" can answer. After arriving at Lehigh in the fall of 1923, he immediately transferred his credits to B-Thorpe, and after she graduated, began making weekly excursions to New York City.

"Bunny" decided to major in English and it seems that he made his most success in love lyrics. Love is the highest expression of poetry and if this be true, we can safely concede that "Bunny" is a great poet. At least a certain charming, dark-haired miss, who has ample opportunity to study him in all his complex intricacies, thinks he is.

But to play the other side of the record, "Bunny" is really a mighty good chum and a mighty fine fellow, and in his chosen profession that of law we feel that "Bunny" will be a great success. Here's to you.

DURING his first year with us "Harly" was an obedient frosh, always willing to serve an upperclassman, if he had to, and always willing to be absent from a soph rush—who wouldn't? In his first three years, he decided to unleash his noble musical talent upon the unsuspecting fair damsels of our neighboring schools, and so the agony of the Musical Clubs was increased.

He will smile and be freely foolish. Now is he not irresistible? Ask any members of the fairer sex, who know him. From all present indications, it is a toss-up as to whether "Harly" will take up his graduate work at Cedar Crest or the University of Delaware. He has made an enviable record in his scholastic and social activities, and, inasmuch as he intends to be a hotel manager, we cannot predict otherwise than that he will make a huge success.

He has many good traits—in fact, only two bad ones; one being the place from which he comes, and the other being the "prep" school he attended. Barring this, he is a worthwhile friend.

AFTER being interference for her all around the huge southern country club dance floor, she sighed, "My, 'Charlie,' but you are the most wonderful plunging fullback." "Charlie" just smiled and thought of former "bull" rings flashed in his mind. Really though, "Charlie" is quite athletic, but a bit Spanish. Morris Kanaly saw to that, and with the help of a strong wind, "Charlie" broke the college javelin record. If Morris had ever seen him out-distance a full charge of buckshot, there is little doubt that he would have made a runner of him, for "Charlie" has lots of wind.

With the women, "Charlie" is a hug and all that goes with it. Don't get excited, girls, for there's just one in Richmond who has taken the strong man's heart away. The feminine sex are not all that counts, for a few letters like Met. E. are "Charlie's" reasons for being here, but so far he has had success in only one course, that being horizontal lab.

It was a hard matter for "Bill" to decide which was the best state to live in, and after trying New York City awhile, "Bill" emigrated to Maplewood, N. J., later moving back to Brooklyn and then New Rochelle.

Our hero came down to Lehigh from Brooklyn Poly Prep with high aspirations of becoming a noted marine engineer. Two years of stren fighting with engineering subjects made "Bill" very glad to change over to B. A. when the marine engineering course was dropped.

Maybe "Bill" is so tall that he might have longer fingers to draw with. Anyhow, he sure wields a mean pencil, and is a mighty handy man as Burr art editor and Mustard and Cheese stage manager. Naturally, with this artistic ability, architecture is his real love, and we look for "Bill" to be planning buildings with the best of them before long.

He is noted for his diligence and conscientiousness. If hard work will get one anywhere his success is assured. Having a rare judgment, a keen sense of humor and the characteristic quality of living and let live, his life should be a path of roses strewn with an occasional thorn which will be his "affaires de coeur." "Tom" is distinctly the "true-to-her" type, and that is saying a lot in these days when variety is the spice of love! TNO KNOW "Tom" is to automatically place one's self in a GESELLSCHAFT whose only dues are those of being a prince of good fellows and of having an underlying desire to accomplish something.

"Tom" bears with ease a distinct sense of responsibility which, however, to most eyes is eclipsed by his habitual quiet and unpretentious manner. His sense of responsibility and his assumption of duties, which would have loomed before most of us as impossibilities, have now ripened by his dynamic efforts into fruits of accomplished preparation for a larger and more active life.

We fear to say more lest, by our weak phrases, we unintentionally limit his true forcefulness and ability. Hence we can only extend our hands with a mingled feeling of sorrow and joy—sorrow because of our separation, and joy because of the pleasure which we derive from thus showing our appreciation of him.

"ZIMMIE" was born in Brooklyn, but not liking the town, moved to Passaic at an early age. His influence there was always a peaceful one, as shown by the strikes which started when he left home to go to college. He decided to enter the profession of test tube washing, and having heard of "Doc" Ullman and Lehigh, he joined the ranks of our class.

"E. K." has always looked at the girls of Bethlehem in disgust, for which we can hardly blame him, but in his junior year he discovered an attraction in Allentown which has taken on a very serious aspect.

"Zimmie" has always been a hard, conscientious worker and at the same time a mighty good fellow. He is one of the most popular and well-known men on the campus. Because of these qualities we expect big things of him after graduation, so go to it, "Zimmie," and show the world what you can do.

Opinions

*The time has come, the walrus said,
To talk of many things,
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax,
Of cabbages and kings.*

ON coming to the eve of college life, one's thoughts are crowded with this and that, including all the "low-down dirt" of a college existence. Taking advantage, the Senior Class Book Committee brought out the shovels and began to excavate for opinions, not realizing the tenor of the material they would handle. Our class, after much provocation, has been found to be cleverly facetious—so witty, in fact, that their opinions of the organizations, activities, and what-nots which do follow, are the most remote from good literature as a rule. It was with great astonishment that the committee discovered the moral turpitude of its fellow classmates. By careful selection we have condensed the wealth of material "dug up" to approximately one umpteenth of its original volume, and this by necessity. That which remains fit to print is still tinged with the spirit of '27 expressed in choice phrases of wit and gravity. The compiling of these ditties has been an enjoyable, but laborious task, mainly due to the fact that the ballots which were distributed for the collection of the desired data were written in everything from phonetic spelling to Chinese. We interpreted them as follows:

"The 27th Wonder of the Century"

was the appropriate opinion of "Johnny" Barr, in speaking of our class. Well said for a little fellow. "The Savior of the University," claims "Ed" Oswald. "Sam" Comstock must have been eaves-dropping on "Ed," for he comes along with a 100 per cent. anti-McConn. However, the latter is a fellow classmate, who matriculated even as you or I, but with the upper hand. Staller disputes the economies of large scale production when he states that our class is "just another reason why we should practice birth control." Brooks spoke of a few wet spots, but they are found in every class and we are satisfied that '27 made a dry impression with the Dean.

"Bad Eggs"

seemed to be the consensus of opinion, regarding the other classes, and that with all due respect to '28. Who doesn't recall immediately that glorious feast at the Allen after the golden barrage?

"Don" Uebelhardt would wish the other classes to Muhlenberg, for he maintains that they missed their stop by six miles. "All wet," is our president's frank opinion. "A lot of us will have to graduate with them"—there, "no dirty remarks," says "Charlie" Class.

Albright says "that they are not even in the same class as ours," while "Chick" Farrell condescends to admit that they are all "Lehigh men."

"A Conservative Newspaper"

cur Brown and White, says "Ike" Pierce and goes on to explain that the board believes in the conservation of its energies, and leaves all of the burden to the advertisers. "Mel" Stultzer further compliments the issue with "All the latest news—as late as possible." And Iuka believes it is a poor color scheme, suggesting black and blue, or else all brown. "Ken" Hensman gives it credit for "doing its best to defend the football team."

"An All-American Bull Session"

does the Arcadia justice, according to "Kelly" Bowler, who is on the roll. George Kennedy calls our governing body the "faculty understudy," which is vindicated by "Al" Pickings' "overruled again!" "Chuck" Roberts actually thought it was a dance hall and after staying with us for these long years, "Gene" Keller is frank to admit that he has never heard of it. "Popular sentiment by request," pipes Brandon Manner likens it to the "Old Gray Mare" and gives credit to its existence by merit of past accomplishment.

"An Exclusive Bull Session"

seems to be Castor's differentiation between the Interfraternity Council and the Arcadia. "Cal" Moore thinks it would make "a good tea-pot dome" and we hesitate to understand to which he refers—the scandal or the tea dances. "The gossip of the Greeks" adds Roberts and he is followed in thought by Cresswell who thoroughly believes "that it is the only place where Greek meets Greek, without starting a restaurant." "Wile" Baker thinks "it sounds high-hat." Brandon offers the opinion that might flatten out the derby, for he thinks it would be a "good market for shovels." O. K., but Brandon does his share and spreads it over a large field.

"Right Hot Humor"

emanates Stoltz, Editor of the Burr, who did his very best on the "Scandal" number. "Not so hot," retorts Shonk, his roommate. "It's easy to get the point," says one devoted Burr reader and he's an Englishman—one Lord Sinkenson. "Art" Mollitor calls it the "Lehigh Valley Whiz-bang," and it is no wonder that "Pop" Nagel has his copy delivered in an asbestos envelope. "Peruse before distributing," advises Ames, who is also affiliated in several ways with the magazine. Rumor has it that he was called by the little girl friend, and therewith resigned from the board. Of course, his studies did demand a great deal of time also. "Tardy wit," says "Charlie" McCombs, but perhaps he is English, or can't appreciate a bad joke.

"Glorifying the American Girl"

is the just opinion of the Mustard and Cheese Club rendered by sweet little Irving Broads, who is pictured herewith in all his glory. He broke the hearts of many a swain on the Coll-Egypt tour. "Damned easy gym credit," "Bill" Wilnmurt remarks from the top of his scenic ladder, while wielding a gilding brush to the rhythm of a Walter Camp record. "Andy" Anderson must have been thinking of a particular kind of cheese when he remarked, "Improves with age." Bowler thinks they are a bunch of bad actors, and "Deke" Bester speaks of a "Phi-Lam—Sigma Chi—Psi U con clave." He forgot the Phi Gams.

"Bass Drum Solos"

are their specialty, according to "Sergeant" Cox. "Rog" Miller thinks it is a "sure way to blow yourself to a football game." "The big fall victory over Lafayette," declares "Jack" Chacey, who insists that Our Band makes Lafayette's sound like a mouth-organ.

Sampson calls it a noise carnival and bets his money that the saxophones will win; i. e., Samp blows his own horn. Hayes evidently got caught when they passed the hat around for a trip to Carnegie Tech for he insists that the band is "capitalized hot air."

"Retired Bartenders"

who appear to be underfed, is "Peck" Deiner's opinion of the Bethlehem police force. "They need shoe horns to get into their traffic booths," says "Mort" Eckstein. There is no doubt but that they know where to get the good beer, and play a good hand of Haussim-pfeffer. "Just typically dumb Dutchmen," responded "Shimmy" Harmon, when asked for a ditty, and he has made quite a study of them. As for the firemen, Cresswell would put them in the Navy, "since they have all had great experience with schooners." "We must give them credit for keeping the home fires burning," says Bowler.

"University of Illinois"

seems to be the thing around college most in need of reformation according to several, but that is a monotonous theme. Other useful suggestions ranging from the Freshmen to the New Cop were offered. Castor is quite sure that there is something wrong with the Faculty. "Charlie" Gessner is a most practical "civile" engineer, who is instigating a very needed reform. He plans to "turn the hill around so that we may always go down." A much better idea than turning the Dean around and perhaps a less difficult task.

"Hard on the Walls of Jericho"

amuses "Duck" DeGraw, who made his greatest contribution to the Glee Club. Earl Schaub thinks "they sound better still" without comparing. We all know their tour will be a howling success. "All are present except harmony," quote Smeltzer, with some sort of reference. "Ben" Ames deserves the leather metal with this one. "They should look for the lost chord and use it." In putting up a defense, McCoombs stated that he thought the Glee Club was "pretty high toned." So high it squeaks!

"Ach!"

exclaims "Al" Picking, in speaking of the neighboring city, Allentown. "Irv" Miles knows it is a foreign place and asks, "Will it ever be Anglo-Saxonized?" "The land of the Dutch and home of the Dumb" seems to be in general favor. But there must be disagreement even in these pages and while "Bert" Peterson urges "Stay away, it isn't worth the carfare," "Bill" Feuerbach maintains it is a "good dating ground."

"Try and Get In"

to either Bishop Thorpe or Lem Sem, groans Dixon. "Bill" Wilhelm evidently had a bit of luck and passed the threshold, but he is ever present with the remark that "too many rules spoil a party." The local institution for the education or disillusion of the fair sex receive all titles from "Hot stuff" down to "Tombs." "No soap" was Demover's duty remark.

"Only Good for Strong Necks"

is "Pop" Spatz's opinion of House Parties, as he compared them to stiff collars. "Herb" McCord thinks "They ain't what they used to be," as do many others. When Raleigh sent his last house-party bill home for consideration the folks thought he gave the whole party to the university, so he requests that we "ask Dad's opinion." Norbeck feels that lost opportunities never return.

"Bag-houses"

and not the king we saw at the zinc refinery, either," speaks Harvey, the embryonic metallurgist, in discussing the Collie, Meade's and the Colonial. Brooks and Trey agree on "rat races." It seems a bit indiscreet of "Bill" Crane to refer to a dance hall as a "training quarter for wrestlers." As such, we might add that they are also intercollegiate—yes, international. "Bucky" Guerrero finds them all "happy hunting grounds." But says Collie is not a dog, and Barba claims it is the start of many long walks.

"One Cure for All Ailments."

was the discovery made by "Ike" McCarty after a few visits to the Dispensary. Even one of the class agreed first and above all that it is a "Bully place." "Al" Trumbull calls it the "original bull-pen" and begs to include a few Camels. Baker found that he could get c. c. tablets that would cure a Charley horse here. Now that the new assistant is established we might call the building "Bull-Hall." "Charlie" Willis ends the argument in grief by saying, "Gee, ten dollars and not even an excuse."

"The Missing Link,"

says "Al" Trumbull in speaking of our new edifice, the Christmas-Saucen Hall. Hague, sportsman and business man by degree, perhaps, mistakes it for "Lehigh's country club," and he should know, for he has an eight o'clock appointment with Carothers every morning when they play off a round of golf—the other kind. Paul Ely simply says, "In the road," and hopes you take the right meaning! Let us adorn Cresswell with the blue ribbon. He says: "Just like shoe-polish 2 in 1." The engineers finish up with a "Looks like Hell."

"A Retreat for Lehigh Flunk-outs"

is "Sam" Comstock's opinion of Lafayette, but we're damn sure he's mistaken. Not even a Lehigh flunk-out would RESORT to Lafayette. Just mention the Maroon to "Peck" Deiner and he sees red. "An all-nationality football team," he declares, and "Jack" Chacey supplements the latter with "The high school captain's paradise." Let us all strike up the old refrain, "the Eagles—they fly high at Lafayette. Oh, the——" "Spats to morning classes," evoked Bowler, who also insists that the institution is a disgrace to its namesake.

The institution is a great service to humanity from an educational point of view," in the opinion of "Jimmy" Reed, but there seems to be disagreement even to this statement. The general sentiment is "To Hell with Lafayette."

"Better Than a Steam Bath"

registered "Fatty" Gould, in disentangling himself from the tent the Major issued to him for a uniform. The R. O. T. C. seems to be especially enjoyed in the senior year when one is allowed to look on "A damned good reason for joining the Navy," cried "Tom" Wood.

"A Wet Question to Discuss" thinks Frey of the 18th Amendment. One can easily tell that "Heck" is not an advocate. "Bill" Crane simply considers it the "one after the 17th." "Bill Shakespeare" O'Leary thinks it is "Much ado about nothing." With the exception of Yeager and Wilburt, the rest of the class agree that it is "all wet."

"Joe" Conrad proceeded to expound at length on the virtues of the subject and concluded by asking for a drink. Hypocrite!

"A Young Girl's Salvation"

replied Bittrich, when questioned on the No Parking Rule. Brandon feels that they are impossible to enforce, since a thicket may break down any old time. Several of the men were prone to remark that it appeared to be another typical "Illinois movement." We are all wondering when the climax will occur—The Princeton idea of no cars at all. Merritt Randles rather sighed, "That eliminates the last of the outdoor sports." Best of all came the pert remark from McCoombs, "A blow to the Self-Aid."

"A Cent is a Cent."

quaked George Kennedy, when Petrikin and the Board of Control were mentioned. "Boy!" he struck the nail right on the head! "Milt" Riskin wants to know when clean-up week comes around. Brandon's reaction to the board was "too much wood and not enough control." We fail to understand "Andy" Anderson's remark, "Too theoretical." We are not dealing with efficiencies. "The old spendthrift," says McCord, who is supplemented by similar remarks from many of the managers. Cunningham suspects, "It won't be long now." "Oh, yes," reminisced Harmon, we had a delightful box-car trip to Carnegie Tech." "Chick" Farrell has a warm spot in his heart for the Beard, and why not?

"Joe Bush"

is the title more recently attached to our New Cop by R. M. Bush, '27. Winks Von Schilling describes him as "one of the four horsemen." "Some more Illinois stuff," chirps "Tom" Wood. We like his horse, but agree with "Mike" Sasse that he is the "headless horseman." "Harry was good enough for us," was the common cry of our multitude.

"Button, Button, Whose Got the Button."

is "Bernie" Wexberg's interpretation of the Rushing Rules. Sampson actually thinks they are complicated, and a few others do not seem to understand them. "Neither does the Interfraternity Council" according to John Simpson Ford, who was not even called upon to remark. "Row" Wetzel thinks they are "pretty fast enough."

"Looks Like a Brewery,"

suggests Warren Stoltz in looking over the library. He is well qualified to express such opinion, we believe. Albright declares the seats in the library are "too hard for the price." We wonder if he also purchased a seat in the chapel as a freshman, or perhaps a radiator in Packer Hall. The wisest crack comes from "Don" Uebelhardt, "It's round because you can never get a book cornered."

"Paradise Gained,"

exclaims "Chink" Roberts, in referring to the Lookout. "Al" Trumbull says, "The high spot of the house-parties," while Caesar Tjerino simply warns "Look out." "Don" Cottrell blames it for the no-parking rules, and Armstrong would call it "the end of the big parade" or "the end of a perfect day."

"Throat Specialists"

as well as "Robbers," is "Bill" Armstrong's opinion of Bob, Miles, Louis, Connie, Mitch, Charlie, and Mammy. "Stan" Kitzinger considers them "College heroes, one and all, and outstanding citizens of the town." "Nat" Sheinfeld calls them "true supply bureaus for the boys," while "Ben" Ames calls them "supporters of Lehigh." "Supporting to a limit" would perhaps be more appropriate. At that some of the boys have the audacity to say that they have never heard of them.

"Beautiful When the Smoke Lifts"

raves "Dud" Hoover in describing our college town. "A utopia for bachelors and others," adds "Joe" Chiodo. "Rudy" Bush is perhaps justified in thinking that it is quite inappropriately named. "Bill" Coombe says, "My home town is a one horse town," to which statement the majority of us agree with the exception perhaps of some of our white-wing class mates. Several agree that it is a home for bootleggers and bats. It is fair in saying that none of us would like to spend our lives here."

"Peace, Be Still"

But chapel is not even a quiet resting place any more. College lectures are more enjoyable for sleeping purposes, in Krey's opinion. "A last opportunity to review notes before an eight o'clock," says "Jack" Hertzler. Earl Schaub declares, "it's lucky they are compulsory," but "Al" Shonk seems right in saying, "Now that we are seniors, we favor both."

"Pulling a Fast One on Carothers"

was "Herk" Frey's greatest achievement in college. But why Carothers only? "Chewing gum in Palmer's class," is Eckstein's boast. "Red" Wright feels that he really learned to do the most work in the shortest time. He has evidently profited by his education. But we ask, what type of work? "Shorty" Barr is proud of the fact that he "grew an inch in four years." How accomplished any one might be in any particular item, one hundred and ninety-four seniors are aware that their greatest achievement was to stay the full "four years."

"How to Wear Clothes—Out"

is the benefit Sampson got from attending college. "None," say many of the boys, but that is far-fetched, undoubtedly, while other still say, "Remains to be seen." "Bill" Wilmurt is satisfied that he "learned about women from it." Norbeck is sure that he benefited by four more birthdays, and has already acquired a worried look on his face.

"Try and Find Out"

was "Bill" Crane's response to the question, "What was the worst thing you did in college?" "Cowboy" Brown admits studying one Saturday night. McCord simply says "getting acquainted." George Kuck claims that he was not in a condition to remember.

"Entered the sea of matrimony," murmured Jedlicka, but he looks none the worse. That is all we could gather, for our class is "too modest."

"Peanut Vender"

is Gould's ambition in life, after going "nuts" in college. "To see Lehigh beat Lafayette" is "Chip" Staller's ambition, which is undoubtedly an unanimous feeling. Carl Norbeck hasn't any, so will probably be the most successful. "Jim" Reed makes up for his classmate by craving to beat "Joe" Stecher on the mat. "Graduation," says Carl Reinsmith, "is the best outlook of all," and is he right!

"A New Dean,"

is "Ken" Robinson's idea for a class memorial. "Tom" Wright suggests "barbed wire fence around the greens," if such methods for their preservation seems so necessary to the administration. Barba wants "moving stairways between buildings" in spite of the fact that he is a track man. "Tony" Nicholas suggests a huge "dumb bell" as a token to the other classes, but Lehigh seems to be well supplied in that direction already. "A football scholarship," offers "Ben" Ames is the way Toadvine claims he kissed the first girl, and that must have been a long time ago. Fred Wilhelm prompts us to see the next issue of "Scientific Method." "In a game of post office," says "Charlie" Willis, the romantic brute. "Down in the mines," admitted Becker. We always thought he was pretty low. "I accomplished it by my own system, which can be learned on the receipt of five dollars," says Bassett. It evidently works, for rumor has it that Horace will pass out the cigars to his brother miners soon.

"In Short Pants"

"Bohunkus Tennessee"

is the bane of Norbeck's existence. "The 12:08 from Allentown" is Bester's chief concern. Baker suffers with the burden of "too much money." "Bill" Cooper does not mind classes or studying, but he does hate "to help Santa Claus trim the Christmas tree."

"Pennsylvania Dutch"

has been the most important thing Aspurna has learned, which proves that he has been around. "How to behave while misbehaving," admits Jedlicka. "Kelly" Bowler can now "sleep with his eyes open," along with 99 per cent. of the others.

"Necking"

is the generally preferred recreation of our class. "Sitting on a radiator and having a hot time," seems to amuse "Mort" Eckstein. "Freddy" Brill gets a great kick out of raising a moustache. The movies seem to be the only clean recreation in Bethlehem, so our whole class feels content to go to the movies six nights a week and to church on Sunday. Studying is done after the movies, and so's your old man!

"A Bunch of Ringers"

The potent remark came from the lips of "Reggie" Pitts, when asked for his opinion of the Town Belles. "An appealing set" is the subtle phrase used by Harley Wilhelm. Barba claims they are "out every time they ring." George Pease insists he "gave the only belle a ring."

"Just Like Pennsylvania's"

is "Ced" Smith's opinion of college politics. He seems to have made quite a study of them. "Rotten, polluted, etc.," comes from all sides. "Keep out of them," is "Norm" Spatz's advice, and that is very easily done, for according to "Dud" Hoover, "they are well segregated." We cannot hesitate to mention "Tamany Hall" up on the hill. "Betaish," insists Bester.

"Nobody Loves Me"

cried Martindale, when asked why he is always a "stag" at dances. "Pop" Spatz claims that he is "not built for a doe" or perhaps he has not the dough to consider a doe. We know he has the doe. So, so. "Bobby" Purcell has an excellent reason, "Look at the Bethlehem girls." Perhaps he is right, but this is a railroad center. Barba would rather "use another person's judgment." "Jack" Cox chirped, "To get a little deer."

"It Speaks for Itself Hic"

"Don" Cottrell wins the keg of Bethlehem's beer with this wise one. "It seems to be on a downward trend," says "Tom" Robinson. "Ned" Martin craves "bigger and better mugs." "It comes near at times," joins in "Pugee" Strohl. Most every one agrees that it is the best in town.

"Charles and Charlie"

are two very prominent reasons why boys leave college in the mind of "Pop" Nagel. "Knowing too much now," is "Jack" Hayes' idea. Other factors are mentioned which include women, liquor, etc., but "Chuck" Fuller leaves us all in doubt with "Too much of this and that."

CONCLUSION

The day is done. The sun sinketh in the west, but victory shall not be ours. Our attempt will ripen with age, and we hope that here the final darkness enfold those herein portrayed or betrayed, we will hear a faint chuckle signifying a satisfaction of the wit; or perhaps we should listen for words of forgiveness. The foregoing tendencies to scintillate have grown from honest endeavor, and a supply of material which ranged from sarcasm to cheap gravity. To censor would eliminate practically everything, and at times, time is more precious than virtue. If any of the latter has been detected in the preceding pages it has escaped our eyes in the rush, and we do not deserve the credit. Opinions are frank expressions as a rule, well worth taking with a grain of salt.

With apologies, therefore, we close the book, taking the last opportunity remaining to express our gratefulness for your acceptance of this compilation, and incidentally the fourteen bucks with which each precious one of you helped make the undertaking possible. The committee feels justified, by dint of effort wasted and time lost, to make one brief disclosure. We trust that you will rejoice with us in our anticipation of an extended sojourn in the balmy airs of Bermuda, where we hope to recuperate sufficiently before graduation.

Finally, with all due respect, we wish to acknowledge with deep appreciation the services and excellent work of the Northern Engraving Company and the Berkemeyer, Keck & Co. Press; and, above all, the co-operation "perfecto" of our very helpful Junior associates, whose masterful work does follow our conclusion. It has been a great pleasure to compile the Senior Class Book, and we hope that it will serve as a cherished memoranda to the members of our illustrious class as the years pass away.

History

JOHN SMITH, of Pocahontas Lane, seems to have started this now popular idea of "self-justification" and so the class of 1928 will accept his precedent and present "A True Relation" of its own life. Believing, too, that in another quarter century another generation will be searching Lehigh EPTOMES for a history of their own dads' classes, just as the author has done, we will try to show ourselves at not too great a disadvantage—John Smith taught us that also.

Now our arrival at Lehigh was much the same as that of every other Lehigh alumnus-to-be. In our excitement and our perplexity we even failed to notice how abominably dirty that Reading Railroad station was, so, surely, we must have been ripe prospects for the designing sophomores. By the way, what relics have been lost to future Lehigh men now that the temporary bridge and the old station have given way to unobjectionable evidences of modernism!

But to return to our story: green as we may have looked, and green as we doubtless were, we knew why we were at Lehigh. Our first year proved us worthy. We trimmed the sophs on Founder's Day; we organized the first fresh Y. M. C. A. Cabinet; we introduced class smokers and dances; and we ended the year with a history-making banquet.

Returning as sophomores, we assumed a new position. Participation in varsity sports was now open to us and in every sport our classmates were found. Especially on the track honors accrued to '28. The spirit of the class, thus excited, was given a real test in handling the new freshman class. By again winning Founder's Day events we retained the mastery.

And now, as juniors, already looking toward the end, yet not eager for it, we take our places in campus life, tested by two years of faithfulness to Lehigh's traditions. Representing her, we lend ourselves energetically to the interests which are vital to our Alma Mater.

Let us quote the Class Historian of one of the dads of the past

*"A junior is a careless soul;
He loves his pipe, he loves his bowl.
Of pleasure he will take his share,
And for but one thing does he care—
The College."*

History

IN THE "usual" histories and biographies of all great men, there appears small mention of anything except the big things, and their enterprises which have met with success. This, however, is an "unusual" history, because while we have had our share of the big things, we have not been passed by in the matter of failures, and in this chronicle will be found mention of both.

There is an old saying that, "Time is a cure for all ills." When we first walked up the steps from the railroad station and stood on the bridge, undecided which way to go for Lehigh University, it was doubtful which had the brighter color, the grass or we. We have since been told that the grass was not even a close second, but a year's time, and wear and tear, did much toward dulling the sheen. Now, as sophomores looking back upon our infant days, we feel that we have qualified to discard the emerald and the black, and don the Brown and White. Our start as freshmen was not all that might have been desired. We gave the sophs something to think about in the Founder's Day sports, but a fumble and a blocked kick doomed us to wear our dinks (as it was most aptly put), "be it Sunday or Blue Monday." However, as the year progressed and "banquet time" came around, the results of our very successful "smokers" became evident in the formation of a wieldy group. We led the sophomores a merry chase to get to their banquet, and established a precedent by having the president of the sophomore class as a "guest" at our function.

During our first days as sophomores we were again the victims of circumstances, and in the annual Founder's Day sports, the "largest class" that ever entered Lehigh University gave ground to the new "largest class." We had the organization and the spirit, but lacked the numbers of the "rabble."

Many of our original classmates have fallen by the wayside, some to return to the fold, some to come back as "ex's"; but, however, they come, they're for Lehigh, and the class of '29.

FRESHMEN

GEORGE ELLIS OLLER
President

History

HISTORY at Lehigh has consistently shown that the numbers in the Freshman Class have grown constantly larger each succeeding year. Since it is an old adage that "History repeats itself," no surprise should be manifested, then, in learning that the class of 1930 is the "biggest ever." We are not only the largest, but, upon the basis of our early record, we are bold to predict that we will prove to be the strongest class that ever entered Lehigh.

The account for the class of '30 begins on September 14, 1926, with the first recorded fact being, "the enrollment was over 600." Our first week, known as "Freshman Week," was used to give us opportunity to acquaint ourselves with Lehigh. For that week we were the attraction.

In fact, we have been the chief attraction ever since, except that instead of being entertained, as during those first few days, we have become the entertainers. Still, though the sophs greeted us as time-honored fashion decreed, when we came out of the chapel wearing our "dinks" for the first time, we soon after tasted the sweet fruits of revenge.

Under a temporary class organization, with Oller as our leader, we prepared for the Founder's Day sports. And, taking four out of the five events, we won the day! This overwhelming defeat not only humbled the sophs, but meant "no dinks on Sunday," a privilege which even our oppressors could not win in their freshman days.

With Oller as a full-term president, we organized a cabinet and prepared for a year of usefulness and activity. Before Christmas a "frosh smoker" was successfully handled and later, prior to midyear examinations, an elaborate dance was held.

In campus activities, though our places are low, we have taken a keen interest. We are represented creditably on the publications and in the Mustard and Cheese. Our successful basketball, football and wrestling squads promise rich material for varsity teams. In swimming and on the cinder path, wearers of '30 have held their own.

Review of Season

A HASTY perusal of the final results will disclose the season of 1926 as one of the most disastrous ever recorded in the annals of Lehigh football. We had seven consecutive defeats before the lone victory. Lafayette's eighth successive triumph over its traditional rival concluded the unfavorable year.

With the 1925 record upon which to base, in early September, and the prognostications of the past season, there seemed little possibility of an auspicious outcome. It appeared that the inevitable must happen. Lehigh, riding on the crests of gridiron victories for the past years, was due for a slump. Unfortunately the dire season was accentuated by many injuries, lack of material, and an imposing schedule.

In spite of the aforementioned troubles, it was hoped that a few of the prevalent indications would dispel any of the doubtful criteria which were evident. Having seven Varsity men to use as a nucleus, prospects were somewhat brightened, notwithstanding the commanding schedule which had been arranged. To meet successfully teams of the caliber of Brown, Marines, Princeton, Muhlenberg, and Bucknell on consecutive Saturdays demanded a more powerful combination than that which Coach Wendell was capable of placing on the field at any time. The Frosh team of 1925 gave very little help, although some of the individual players secured regular berths on the Varsity before November arrived.

From the kick-off in the St. Johns game, until the final whistle had blown in the Lehigh-Lafayette fray, it was discernible that the correct backfield combination had not been encountered. To the students and adherents of the Brown and White team there appeared to be something lacking in the choice of the backs. Speedy men of the Hayes and Ford type were on the bench during the majority of the games.

The line material was excellent, lacking only in technique to a small degree. That the ceaseless and untiring work on the part of Eastman soon eliminated this, became apparent in the strong forward wall which represented the University. Injuries, which eliminated them from further competition, befell Wynn, Clark, and Martin, three Varsity men, weakened the ends considerably.

At times during the season the team displayed spurts of an exceptionally good brand of football, only to fall back into the ruts of defeat after losing some shining opportunities. The light but fast backfield was unable to take advantage of the strong offensive line. The repertoire of trick plays, calculated to fool their opponents, was missing until the closing days of the season.

The spirit shown by the entire student body throughout the long and uninviting string of discouraging reversals was commendable and highly optimistic. It is without doubt that the morale of the vanquished warriors rose, unmeasurably when the students, accompanied by the University Band and the cheerleaders, assembled beneath the clubhouse windows to cheer "their team" in face of the defeat of that afternoon.

The lid-opener of the season was staged with St. Johns of Brooklyn. The torrid summer weather presented ideal baseball conditions, with the accompanying result that little in the way of football was shown by either of the teams. The visitors, ever alert, exhibited this faculty when one of their backs picked up a Lehigh fumble and negotiated the remaining twenty-five yards for the only score of the game. Shortly afterward Lehigh carried the ball to St. John's four-yard mark and, with a touchdown in their grasp, lost it by one of the innumerable fumbles.

Though Lehigh succumbed to a 16-6 defeat at the hands of Gettysburg, they showed most encouraging form in comparison with the initial tilt. A thirty-yard field goal by Spangler was the only score of the first half. A steady fifty-five yard march culminated in a G-burg score, which was soon followed by another as the result of Tuckey's eighty-yard run. The final five minutes of play found the Brown and White at their best with Hayes and Hand especially effective. Lehigh's points came when a blocked punt and a forward pass, Hand to Burke, tallied a touchdown.

Providence, R. I., was the scene of the next conflict. Brown, the team of "iron" men, ran roughshod over Wendell's charges whose offense even failed to materialize in the production of a first down. A safety in the early moments of the game gave the Bruins the impetuous to carry thirty-two points across the final line. Wynn's seventy-yard run, after intercepting a pass, was the exciting play of the struggle.

"Tom" Keady, former football coach at Lehigh, brought his devil-dogs to the Steel City on the following week. Unusual stunts in the form of several daring birdmen and the Marines' Fifth Regiment Band were added attractions. Although they scored twenty first downs, the Marines tallied but twice. Splendid and inspiring defensive work by the Lehigh line in the pinches accounted for the low score. The intense bitterness of the contest can never be depicted, especially when the visitors were held for downs on the twelve-yard stripe several times.

The slim sum of one point was all that remained between Lehigh and the glorious joys of a tie game on the Saturday afternoon of October 23rd. The Brown and White, after holding the Tigers scoreless in the first half, and yielding one touchdown and a goal from it in the third period, came through with a surging flash of forward passes in the concluding minutes to score a touchdown. Only the fact that Ford's try for point was low and partially blocked gave Princeton the long end of the 7-6 score.

Lehigh showed an overhead attack, coupled with an airtight defense, which was a revelation to behold. The highly touted Orange and Black machine was pitted against a fighting, rejuvenated team, one which unleashed an undeniable aerial attack that followed O'Callaghan's forty-yard sprint. Successive passes to Ford and Simes put the pigskin on the nine-yard line. The captain-elect for 1927 caught the third pass from Hand and brought joy to the thousands of Lehigh rooters by evading three would-be tacklers and crossing the Tiger line.

The game with Muhlenberg on the last Saturday of October enabled the Allentonians to score their third victory of the sixteen-game series. The fast and tricky backfield, led by the sensational Borelli, tore their opponents to shreds after the first half had closed with a 9-6 score. A 67-yard run by Zahnnow prevented Lehigh from being shut out.

Lehigh traveled to Lewisburg the following week to help Bucknell commemorate Walter Camp Day with the Alumni Homecoming Game. A rough contest ensued, resulting in injuries to Littell, Wilson, Hand, and Holtz. The Bisons appeared as a one-man team with Diehl, the brilliant, fleet-footed back, scoring their four touchdowns.

Twelve straight games overshadowed by defeat. The losing streak began after the Rutgers victory of 1925 and, coincidentally, terminated by the 14-0 triumph over the Raritan team in the warm-up game preliminary to the final classic at Easton. It was an aggressive backfield which swept around the ends for repeated gains and two touchdowns. A diversified attack completely upset the Scarlet gridders.

The Saturday preceding Thanksgiving marked the sixtieth meeting between the two arch-rivals, Lehigh and Lafayette. The "big-game" took place in the new and unfinished Maroon stadium. Although everything in football logic predicted an Easton victory, the idea was never entertained that McCracken's charges would tally 35 points while holding their opponents scoreless.

The never-say-die spirit of the Lehigh players prevailed throughout the afternoon. This was especially conspicuous when the losers, within the shadows of their own goal posts, rallied and held their own, thus staving off additional scoring. Upon the conclusion of the third quarter the final result was never in doubt. At times there were a few flashy but brief indications of Captain Littell's warriors displaying an attack. The opening plays appeared threatening and had Lafayette on the run, as did a forward passing offense in the late moments of the fourth period.

It was the case of a strong, well-drilled, and experienced team, with a successful string of victories to spur them onward, pitted against an eleven of the gamest men who have ever represented the South Mountain institution. A less versatile, but fighting-mad Lehigh team, true to tradition, was simply not able to cope with the superb work of the highest scoring machine in the country.

Review of the 1926 Season

TWO disheartening problems faced "Jing" Johnson, former major league hurler for the Philadelphia Athletics, in his debut last spring as the head coach of the Brown and White nine. A new combination had to be moulded, for there was a dearth of material, due to the havoc which graduation and ineligibility had raised among the ranks of the star performers. In addition, the schedule-makers, with the success of the previous season still fresh in their memories, had compiled one of the hardest schedules.

In spite of these seemingly unsurmountable difficulties, the team won six out of the fourteen games. Nullifying this showing was the capture of the annual Lehigh-Lafayette series. This marked the third consecutive year in which the homesters have dropped the initial struggle to the Eastonians, only to win the remaining two and the accompanying title.

In honor and respect to its Captain-elect, Charles Malcom Prior, who died from injuries sustained while playing in the West Virginia Wesleyan-Lehigh football game, the team had no permanent captain. Preceding each game Coach Johnson appointed a man to the captaincy for that day.

Inclement weather necessitated the cancellation of two of the five—Quantico Marines and the University of Maryland—games listed for the annual southern trip. Princeton took the measure of Lehigh in the American League Park in Washington on April 2nd. Ineffective hurling, combined with four costly errors and the three Orange and Black circuit blows, gave Nassau the game. Hayes started with four hits.

On the 3rd of April the University of North Carolina managed to eke out an 11-10 victory in the final inning of a slugging fiasco. Lehigh had tied the score in the seventh, when they shoved six markers across the pan. Two days later Seltzer dropped a tough pitchers' battle to Darlington, the University of Virginia ace.

Playing at home for the first time, Lehigh won a 9-1 tilt with Dickinson. Weston was robbed of no-hit, no-run honors when the visitors doubled twice in the seventh inning to cross the plate. Mullaney led with a home-run and a brace of singles. A slugging orgy in the late innings, featuring Ambler and Hayes with three blows apiece, culminated in a win over Ursinus, 11-3.

Timely stickwork by the Allentown collegians plus the airtight pitching of Ziegenfuss, enabled them to run away with Lehigh. This defeat was atoned for in the 15-5 triumph over Rutgers. Dietrich, making his first appearance on the mound, held his opponents in hand until the ninth when they bunched a few hits for their runs.

Playing in a protracted batting slump at a time when they were opposing two of the strongest collegiate nines in the East, the Brown and White lost successive games to Villanova, the University of Pennsylvania, and to Lafayette. Lafayette came from behind three times to knot the score. They won out in the ninth when Gebhardt's double cleaned the bases. Five errors aided the Maroon to a great extent.

For the second time Dietrich faced the Raritan players and turned them back, this time to the tune of 8-4. Rutgers had previously beaten Princeton, 10-2.

On May 15th Lehigh emerged the winner in a heavy hitting affair with Lafayette. The Maroon took an early lead, but never recovered their poise from the local slugging in the fifth and seventh innings.

The following Saturday Lehigh made the season a complete success by winning the third and deciding game of the series. Two Ruthian clouts to the far reaches of March Field by Nevins helped Weston and Seltzer while holding their opponents to five hits.

The season closed with a defeat which Muhlenberg administered in a ten-inning game that was disputed by numerous poor decisions. The final score was 4-3.

Review of the 1927 Season

FOR the initial time in the chronicles of Lehigh University the Brown and White matmen climaxed the season with the annexation of the coveted title of Intercollegiate Champions. Conceded a champion in Captain Reed, the 125-pound representative, and merely a fighting chance to capture the highest glories, the Sheridan-coached wrestlers ascended from the lowly position of two points at the close of the semi-finals to tie with Yale at 14 each.

After the preliminary round Lehigh had four men who qualified for the semi-finals, McGovern, Reed, Heilman, and Lehr. In the succeeding round, Heilman and McGovern were both defeated. The diminutive "Jimmy" Reed survived the finals, thereby establishing a congratulatory precedent. Although previous men have won two championships, the Lehigh leader has earned his crowns in different classes. In his junior year he wrestled in the lightest division, while in his concluding season he entered the 125-pound group.

By placing men in more weights than any other university, Lehigh had the best team on the mats. One champion, a runner-up, and three third-places readily demonstrates the veracity of this thus doubling the score tallied by the visitors. Captain Reed and Heilman scored falls.

Although leading 13 to 3 at the end of the 145-pound bout, Lehigh was destined to remain scoreless after that, thereby permitting Princeton to grab a close result. The defeat marked the fourth time since September that Lehigh has been beaten out by the smallest margin possible by the Orange and Black. Reed and McGovern tossed their opponents with ease, while Heilman added three points on a time advantage. The Princeton football star, Meisalhan, had a tough proposition in throwing B. Levitz, also a gridiron luminary.

With Heilman shifted to the 135-pound division, and other new faces in the line-up, Lehigh presented a radical difference when they trimmed Syracuse, 16 to 13. As usual the winners made a strong showing in the lightweight classes, while the New Yorkers shaped up better in the heavier groups.

Lafayette was decisively overwhelmed when Lehigh annexed every bout to tally a total of 27 points. The first three bouts terminated in falls for Lehigh. Littell, football captain, made his debut by winning on a comfortable time advantage in the unlimited class.

The trip to Ithaca proved disastrous. After trailing by 11 points, the 1926 champions succeeded in obtaining a greater score by winning the four remaining bouts. The outcome of the afternoon circled on the result of the heavyweight tussle in which the Lehigh man was thrown with only nine seconds left of the second extra period.

Undoubtedly one of the most exciting meets ever witnessed in Taylor Gymnasium was that which resulted when Yale visited Bethlehem. The "Light Brigade" scored victories in the opening bouts. These were overshadowed by the close defeats which followed in the heavier classes. Shenton, appearing in his first varsity match, was thrown by the Blue heavyweight with only 15 seconds left. The loser put up a commendable exhibition of grit, but his opponent was not to be denied the gruelling match.

Winning one bout on a fall and three on decisions Lehigh vanquished the Navy wrestlers at Annapolis by the score of 14 to 11. The victors' lone fall came in the final affair on which the outcome hinged and in which Littell pinned his adversary in less than seven minutes to clinch the victory. Reed and McGovern won with plenty to spare, while Heilman lost a heartbreaker by 28 seconds after two extra periods of wrestling.

There was thunderous applause when the final numerals showed Lehigh to be tied with Yale for the honors. Syracuse and Cornell were tied for second place with 12 apiece, Pennsylvania had eight, Columbia five, with Penn State and Princeton deadlocked, each having 3 points.

In meets won and lost the 1927 team failed to duplicate the record made by the 1926 athletes. Captain Reed's team won an equivalent number of contests, but dropped an additional one.

Two of the three setbacks were sustained by one-point margins, Princeton and Yale winning the laurels by 14 to 13 and 15 to 14 scores, respectively.

Led by the diminutive Capt. "Jimmy" Reed, the lightweights established a precedent which drew the attention of the sporting writers. The "Light Brigade," as they were popularly called, consisted of McGovern, Reed, and Heilman.

Probably the brightest feature of the season was the 14-to-11 victory gained at Annapolis. Lafayette received the second consecutive white-wash in as many years when they were hosts to the Brown and White at Easton.

The season opened with a triumph over the powerful New York Athletic Club wrestlers in whose ranks were several Metropolitan champions. Victories in four classes, two falls and two decisions, gave the collegians 16 points,

Review of the 1926 Season

WITH the inspirational playing and leadership of Captain Robinson to guide them, the Lehigh lacrosse squad acquitted themselves favorably during the 1926 season. Out of the eight scheduled games, four resulted in successful conquests, three were dropped, and one ended in a tie score. This does not include the post-season game in which the Varsity triumphed over the Philadelphia Lacrosse Club by an overwhelming score.

Something of a unique nature accompanied the victories and setbacks. It seemed predestined that Lehigh could not win two consecutive games. With the previous fray under their belts, O'Neill's charges would lose the following struggle.

Lehigh helped Princeton inaugurate the season at Palmer Stadium. The Orange and Black players enjoyed a three-point lead until the final fifteen minutes of play. Lehigh spurted and gave an exhibition of a fast attack as has ever been witnessed in the historic stadium. Widdowfield, Lister, and Roberts tallied in this rally, thus making the affair even-steven. Darkness prevented the continuation of the game into extra periods.

Rutgers was completely at the mercy of Lehigh when these teams battled in Taylor Stadium a week later. The combination of accurate passing and a powerful attack spelled defeat for the scarlet-jerseyed men.

A strong speedy Navy team with an impenetrable defense administered Lehigh's initial defeat at Annapolis on April 24th. However, it must be added that the 8-1 score does not give the South Mountain players the credit for the battle they put up against the future Admirals. The Academy players beat Lafayette, 23-0, the week before they lined up against Lehigh.

Proving themselves to be the proverbial mud-horses, the Brown and White stick-wielders whitewashed Lafayette in a midweek game. The homesters played with the brilliance of a championship combination. Many substitutes were sent into the contest after the Maroon were behind, 7-0, at the end of the first half. The result was never in doubt. Captain Robinson ran wild with four points, being closely followed by "Dick" Stauffer, who annexed three.

The house-party jinx traveled to Hoboken with the team on May 1st. Although out-classing the Stevens team in regards to passwork and skill with the stick the lacrossers could not slip the pellet through the 'Stute goalie more than once. Captain Robison prevented a shut-out by sending a neatly placed shot between the bars. The Hobokenites emerged a 2-1 winner.

In an extra period game, replete with thrills, Swarthmore was vanquished on the home-field on Sub-Frosh Day. After tying the score, Lehigh forged ahead only to see Rickard come across with his third and equalizing point in the concluding seconds of play. The homesters tallied twice during the additional time. The Garnet led at half time, 3-1.

After holding the more experienced University of Maryland team on even terms in the opening periods the Lehigh team fell down in the second half. In direct contrast they presented a ragged defense which greatly aided the visitors to count four extra pointers and win out, 7-3.

The intercollegiate season was closed in a most befitting manner. An 11-3 victory was won against the University of Pennsylvania athletes. The mediocre stickmanship of the first half was turned into excellent teamwork in the closing thirty minutes. It marked the fourth consecutive victory over the Philadelphians in as many years.

For the benefit of the returning alumni and other visitors a match was arranged with the Philadelphia Lacrosse Club during Graduation Week. Several former wearers of the Brown and White colors were in the visiting line-up. Both clubs were on par for a while, but the better conditioned players soon made it a walkaway for the undergraduates.

Review of the 1926-1927 Season

ALTHOUGH four varsity members of the champion 1925-1926 team helped comprise the quintet for the following season, the loss of the flashy and dependable Captain Weinstein proved to be almost irreparable. Hailed as the possible winners of the mythical championship of the Eastern colleges, the Brown and White failed to reach the acme of expectations. However, they did win the Middle Atlantic States Conference laurels without encountering dangerous opposition. Every league contestant bowed to the superiority of the winners.

A poor start in the early part of the campaign was nullified by the splendid seven-game winning streak which culminated the schedule. For the second year Lafayette was forced to acknowledge the wide superiority of the Lehigh basketballers. The Maroon players have dropped six consecutive court struggles to their Bethlehem opponents.

The team, which scored successive victories over Princeton, Fordham, Navy, Lafayette, and Rutgers last year, was intact in its personnel with the exception of Weinstein. With a surplus of promising material from the frosh ranks prospects for the new coach, Geary, to emulate the success enjoyed by Lingle, were exceedingly bright.

Misfortune in the form of the lack of a suitable floor to practice on proved an early and severe handicap with which to contend. The damage which the fire caused on the night of the Lafayette smoker was extensive, necessitating the complete renovation of the balcony seats and the floor. This prohibited the formation of a powerful squad at the initial stage of the season.

As is customary the lid-opener took place at Princeton. The Tigers were victorious in a 26-to-20 game which was characterized by the nervousness of the Lehigh players and the sensational baskets by the winners.

Fordham had to play an invincible brand of ball in order to keep their slate clean. Lehigh succumbed to a 31-to-27 reversal in the New York City gymnasium.

A hectic struggle marked the University of Pennsylvania-Lehigh game. The Philadelphians nosed out their rivals in a 26-25 thriller at the Palestra.

West Point and Annapolis emerged triumphant by the respective scores of 24 to 22 and 41 to 28 in games which took place within four days.

Lehigh initiated the new floor with a 30-to-20 victory over Muhlenberg on the Wednesday evening preceding the opening of the second semester. The Allentown dribblers were dangerous in the early periods of the game, but soon relinquished their short lead.

The following Friday night Lehigh entertained the strong Crescent Athletic Club, of Brooklyn, who came down with an imposing string of victories. Coralling eleven out of eighteen possible foul tries, the Brown and White won a close and interesting game by the margin of five points.

The team failed to make it three victories in four days when Rutgers maintained a 31-to-26 advantage at the call of "time." With the score deadlocked and only two minutes left, the Scarlet forwards delighted their followers by tossing in three needed double-deckers.

A week of rest placed the players in excellent condition as the 45-to-23 win over Lafayette indicated. The fast passing of the entire team combined with the accurate shooting of Billmeyer and C. Schaub was not to be denied.

Midwinter Alumni Day was appropriately celebrated by the conquest of the Blue and White of Franklin and Marshall. The spectacular playing of Smith and E. Schaub predominated and greatly helped in the rolling up of the highest score of the year, 49 to 25.

The two captains, Smith and C. Schaub, scintillated at Easton in the second game of the annual series. Eight two-pointers apiece were more than enough to vanquish the Lafayette collegians.

Lehigh's last traveling team journeyed to Haverford on the following Tuesday where it swamped the quintet of that college, 39 to 13. The second half showed the victors in all their power, the opponents failing to net a single field goal during that period. Three were allotted to them in the opening half.

For the third successive time the Lafayette cagemen went down under the onslaught of the Lehigh five, giving the latter a clean sweep of the annual series. It marked the fifth straight triumph for the Gearymen.

Contrary to anticipations, the opponents in the last two games furnished an excellent quality of teamwork. After amassing a huge lead against Juniata, the Brown and White seemingly fell apart, but managed to win out, 30-26.

Billmeyer's long two-pointer assured the seventh consecutive victory, when Lehigh defeated Swarthmore on the Mary Lyons School court, 26 to 24.

Review of the 1926 Season

WHEN the spiked athletes of the University hung up their shoes at the finish of the Intercollegiate last May it marked the conclusion of a most successful season. In fact, it was the best year that the Brown and White trackmen have ever enjoyed under the tutelage of Head Coach Kanaly.

The season started inauspiciously when two meets were dropped to Swarthmore and New York University. On the home stretch the equivalent number were won. It is interesting to note that the losing meets were scheduled at Bethlehem, while the winning ones were taken on the opponents' fields. The homesters placed seventh in the Intercollegiate held on May 21st and 22nd.

Rutgers and Lafayette boasted of having never lost to Lehigh in track since back in the war days of 1915. Neither one carried off the honors this year, Lafayette being swamped on March Field to the tune of 70-56, while Rutgers succumbed, 68-58.

On April 17th Swarthmore were the guests in Taylor Stadium and did the unethical thing by annexing a 69-54 win. This cannot be viewed with alarm when it is taken into consideration that the victors were the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Champions. In spite of the high wind, Lehigh took six firsts and five seconds in the fourteen events out of which it was possible to place only 39 men.

The Brown and White men broke two records. "Jim" Yeager bettered the Lehigh record of the javelin throw by  $8\frac{1}{2}$  inches. For this he received a major "L." In addition the big athlete placed in two other events.

Clayton broke the tape and also the Lehigh-Lafayette dual meet record, when he negotiated the hundred yard dash in 10.3-5 seconds. Gisriel, Billmeyer, Wagner, and Cox each played in two events.

With superb weather conditions and a fast track favoring the athletes of both colleges, the strong New York University track and field men made it two straight defeats, when they carried back a  $72\frac{1}{2}$  to  $52\frac{1}{2}$  triumph to the University grounds. Both teams captured seven firsts, but the visitors excelled in the field events, thereby clinching the meet.

Garnering ten first places in comparison to the four taken by Rutgers, Lehigh won its first meet of the year at New Brunswick on May 8th. All of the six field events were won by the brown-jerseyed men. On the track both teams gained four events.

Once again Yeager starred by taking two firsts and a third place for a total of eleven points. A new dual meet record was set when Yeager hurled the javelin high and far, thus surpassing the former distance made by Willis (Lehigh) in 1924. Another pleasing and distinctive achievement for Yeager was taking the honors in the shot. He is the first Lehigh man to ever do so against a Scarlet team.

According to the available records the last victory Lehigh recorded over Lafayette in track was in the spring of 1915. It was a long wait, to be sure, but the victory on May 12th was sweet to all. The outcome was never in doubt, for the South Mountaineers earned nine first places and a tie for a tenth.

Clayton showed the way to his competitors in both dashes. Wagner, another sophomore, breezed in, a winner, in both the timber-topping races. The third man to win two events was Gisriel, the Captain-elect of 1927. He won both the weight events.

Features of the contest were the breaking of the dual meet record in the 880 by Cox of Lehigh, and Gisriel's heave, which was far beyond the one of the preceding season. Wagner's hurdle wins were the first ones ever won by Lehigh over Lafayette.

The Intercollegiate were held on May 21st and 22nd. The Upper Field was the scenes of a galaxy of stars representing the sixteen colleges and universities which are members of the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Association. It was the fourteenth championship with over 300 athletes competing.

For the second consecutive year Swarthmore emerged the winner. The scanty margin of  $\frac{1}{2}$  a point separated them from Haverford. The losers led until the final event, the 220-yard dash. This was won by present champions.

Cox was the only Lehigh individual to place a first position. In a wonderful race, during which he overcame a seemingly lost cause, he finished ten yards ahead of his nearest rival. The finals for Lehigh were: Clayton, 4th in 100-yard; Billmeyer, 4th in 440 yard; Gisriel, 5th in shot; Yeager, 3rd in discus; and Cox, 1st in the 880-yard.

The colleges finished in the following order: Swarthmore, 29; Haverford,  $28\frac{1}{2}$ ; New York University, 23; Alfred,  $21\frac{1}{2}$ ; Union, 18; Rutgers, 17; Lehigh,  $13\frac{1}{2}$ ; Gettysburg, 13; Dickinson, 12; Franklin and Marshall, 9; Johns Hopkins, 7; Lafayette, 7; Muhlenberg, 5; Washington, 4; and the University of Delaware, 2.

Review of the 1926 Season

THE fall of 1926 marked one of the most successful seasons which any cross-country team has enjoyed during the regime of Coach Kanaly as track mentor at Lehigh.

Union and Princeton won their scheduled meets, while Dickinson was beaten by a perfect score. The Brown and White runners showed the way to the spiked representatives of Lafayette and Rutgers in a triangular meet held in New Brunswick. To climax the season Captain Aitken's harriers annexed third place in the Intercollegiates.

Lehigh traveled to Union on October 9th and failed to stop the record-breaking hill-and-dale team of the Schenectady institution. Bruce's stars tallied 18 points in comparison to the 39 made by Lehigh.

In direct contrast Lehigh scored a perfect victory over Dickinson on the modified Woodland Course on the next Saturday. Aitken, Sames, Chickering, Lange, and Roberts crossed the tape before a visitor came in view.

Cross-country suffered the same fate as did soccer and football at Princeton on October 23rd.

Princeton won each of the struggles by a one-point margin. Chickering, after leading for a majority of the way, was nosed out by Welles, who staged a fifty-yard spurt to clock in two seconds ahead of the Bethlehem man.

The victory over Rutgers and Lafayette was exceptionally appreciated, it being the first triumph ever scored over Lafayette. The meet was held on the Buccleigh Park Course. Bernie Wefer's squad followed closely, but failed to match the clock-like rhythmic Lehigh strides of Aitken, Sames, and Chickering.

Third place honors, over a large field of competitors, were won by Lehigh in the annual championship run of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Association held over the Van Cortlandt Park Course in New York City. Alfred University captured team laurels for the second consecutive year. Union finished second, a scanty four points ahead of Lehigh. Captain Aitken came in fifth, defeating, among others, the three Union athletes who had previously outrun him in other contests.

Review of the 1927 Season

HANDICAPS in the form of the resignation of Head Coach Gulick, who left at the opening of the season to take a position at Princeton University, and the ineligibility of three of the varsity performers as a result of the midyear examinations, did not phase J. Harmon, who assumed the coaching reins. Having been in active competition for four years, the 1926 captain was not qualified to represent Lehigh in any further meets. His experience gained in many a closely contested race proved invaluable to the Brown and White natators.

Preliminary meets were staged to aid in the development of the untried aspirants. The juniors were successful in garnering the honors in the interclass meet.

The opening conflict for both teams took place at Annapolis on January 15th. The Middies were victorious in every event as they annexed first place in all of them. No records were broken, although both teams displayed excellent work for so early in the season.

Despite the fact that injuries kept two of the regulars out of the meet, Lehigh ducked the mermen of Lafayette for the second consecutive year. Five first places and a majority of seconds clinched the struggle.

A fast Rutgers swimming team toppled Lehigh at New Brunswick by a wide difference. Regardless of the appearance of some new and unpolished material, the losers were too inexperienced to perform creditably. The Scarlet tankmen broke three eastern inter-collegiate records. These record-smashers also constituted new pool records.

Showing vast superiority throughout the afternoon the Brown and White swimmers encountered little opposition from their next opponent, Catholic University. The Bethlehem amphibians captured all but one first place while making the third successive victory in as many years against the Washington collegians. The visitors were unable to score more than 13 points, while Lehigh totaled 46.

Seven first places and four seconds gave the Lehigh team a decisive 45-to-14 decision over the Garnet splashers of Swarthmore on the following Saturday. Exceptionally good times were clocked in all the events. Captain Raleigh and Leader shared the honors for their university, each one scoring two first places.

The season terminated with the third consecutive victory, this time at the expense of Cornell University. The New Yorkers were submerged by the score of 34½ to 24½. The record-breaking quarter-mile swim won by Webbe shattered the mark made by Coach Harmon last year. Conspicuous as the other bright spots of the evening were the sensational relay race which ended in a tie, and the notable work of the visiting captain, Larco, who garnered first honors in both the 50-yard and the century swims, besides swimming as the anchor man for the Red and White relay team.

The South Mountain natators suffered an unexpected reversal in the eastern Collegiate Swimming Association meet held at Lafayette. Rutgers exhibited its strength in winning the team honors. They were much too powerful for the other competitors, scoring 45 points as against the 40 collected by the four other colleges.

Second place honors were keenly contested. Lafayette scored 14 points, nosing out Delaware by the margin of a half a point. Lehigh followed with 11½, while Swarthmore had only one marker.

Review of the 1926 Season

REGARDLESS of the fact that the Brown and White racquet wielders barely won a majority of their scheduled matches, it must be taken into consideration that among the opposing winners were Yale, Princeton, Harvard and the Naval Academy. And any one of these four teams is an immediate threat to intercollegiate tennis champions. Several of their members are experienced performers in the Junior and Senior National Singles tournaments.

Adverse weather conditions prevailed intermittently during the season. This had on little bad effect upon the squad while in training.

A bright light throughout the season was the scintillating play of Neil Sullivan, the captain-elect for 1927. Although kept from winning the team honors for Lehigh at the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament, Sullivan won the individual championship. In addition he brought back a team title for runners-up position in the final standing.

The local Number "1" man, who is a protegee of Tilden and his type of tennis, experienced little trouble in reaching the finals which were played at the Haverford College courts. He clinched the cup and championship by easily defeating the Bucknell star, Rudesell, in three straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. At no time during the entire match was Sullivan in any danger of being overtaken by his opponent.

In the final summary of points Bucknell amassed 21; Lehigh, 20; Swarthmore, 12; New York University, 12; Delaware, 8, and Johns Hopkins, 4.

Rutgers and New York University traveled to Bethlehem in the opening week and received severe setbacks. The Hall of Fame courtmen took but two out of the nine matches, dropping all of the three doubles.

This auspicious start was given a temporary reversal when Lehigh dropped three consecutive contests. The Naval Academy triumphed with a 5-4 decision. Their captain, Lyman, furnished the surprise of the day, when he vanquished Sullivan after three hard-fought sets. The University of Pennsylvania annexed a 5-2 victory at the Germantown Cricket Club. Every player was considerably handicapped by the soggy condition of the courts.

Princeton, a recognized leader in intercollegiate tennis circles, had an easy time with Lehigh. A redeeming feature of the defeat was the sensational triumph which Sullivan achieved over Van Ryn, the Orange and Black ace. The Princetonian, who lost two out of the three sets, 13-11, 6-3, 5-7, is one of the most brilliant players in the East.

Four victories in a row over the neighboring rivals helped amend the prior overthrows. Lafayette couldn't solve the serves and returns of their rivals at either Easton or Bethlehem. It marked the second consecutive year that Lafayette has dropped both her struggles to the Brown and White.

The Penn State match proved easier than had been contemplated, Lehigh capturing eight of the nine engagements. Swarthmore was unable to win more than two out of the seven matches scheduled.

The season was concluded by a short trip to Cambridge and New Haven. This proved decidedly disastrous to the South Mountain players. Harvard whitewashed them 9-0 permitting them nary a match. Lehigh won but one match of the nine played with Yale.

Review of the 1926 Season

SIX defeats and three victories. Truly no record to boast about, but behind those statistics stands Dame Fortune, who seems to have controlled the majority of the games which Lehigh lost. Four of the six setbacks were suffered by one-point margins. The Brown and White were there, leading up to the last few moments when the lucky breaks broke for their opponents.

Due to the successful seasons which Coach Carpenter's teams have enjoyed in the past years, Lehigh was made a member of the Eastern Intercollegiate Soccer Association last fall. This was quite a distinction for the league boasts only of the best and largest colleges and universities in the East.

Although Lehigh failed to attain a high standing in the final ranking it was signally honored by having its Captain, "Red" Nevins, placed as center halfback on the mythical eleven of the league. While given choice as halfback, the versatile athlete is equally as prominent as a forward.

The season opened with a practice game and defeat sustained at the hands of the strong Wanderers of Bethlehem. The victors, a team of great repute in soccerdom, displayed splendid teamwork and scored three times after Robinson had placed his team in the lead.

Temple traveled to Bethlehem the following Saturday and, in spite of their commendable fighting spirit, were vanquished by Nevins' men. Reed scored early, but this was equalized by a Philadelphian tally. Beck put the game on ice by scoring twice in the closing quarter.

The brilliant work of the Haverford booters was too much for the Brown and White on October 9th. The visitors revenged the 6-1 defeat which they received the previous season. The defensive play of Collins, the diminutive Lehigh halfback, was outstanding, but not enough to cope with his opponents alone.

Missing many excellent opportunities to forge ahead and win, Lehigh was nosed out by a fast Cornell team on Lehigh Field. The local backs missed a series of kicks which permitted the Ithacans to tie the score and conquer in the concluding three minutes. Dixon scored three times and scintillated with Robinson and Beck.

The next game was a one-point reversal. Princeton emerged on the long end of a 2-1 struggle. The game, which took place on the memorable Poe Field, was well played in spite of the rain-soaked turf. A questionable foul, called on a Lehigh back, gave the homesters the chance to score the winning point on the successful penalty kick.

For the second time in as many years Lehigh traveled to West Point and returned with a 2-0 decision. The Pointers proved to be a well-balanced team, but could not combat with the fine playing of Phyle, Nevins, and Beck. The last two men scored for their team.

The undefeated Annapolis eleven was given a bad scare in the next game. All the scoring, 2-1, came in the first ten minutes of play. From then the game was essentially defensive.

Another 2-1 defeat. This time Swarthmore was victorious after staging a heart-breaking, last-minute rally during which the Mainliners came through with their second point. Both teams were evenly matched, neither combination being able to score in the first half.

The two 2-1 overthrows failed to dim the aspirations of the team in its anticipation for the Lafayette game which concluded the season.

After threatening in the early portion of the game the Maroon succumbed to its sixth defeat in seven years at the hands of Lehigh. As in the preceding year, when Lafayette eked out a 2-2 tie, Lehigh was the aggressor throughout the afternoon. It was a hard-kicking, fast game during which Collins and Dixon were mighty factors in repelling their opponents. Important in the achievement of this victory was the stellar playing of Captain Nevins, who finished his collegiate soccer career in a perfect manner by scoring the only points made.

Mustard and Cheese

SOME forty-odd years ago, in 1885, Richard Harding Davis founded the Mustard and Cheese Dramatic Association of Lehigh University. From that time until 1923 this club presented a melodrama each year, but its policy is now to produce musical comedies instead.

This year's show, "Mercy Sakes," was a musical comedy dealing with events Western. The first act is laid in New York, but the scene then moves to Texas, where the main action takes place.

The script was written by J. W. McKinnon, '28; P. E. Ketterer, '27, and J. G. Ridsdale, '27. G. F. Motter, '28, wrote the musical score, and R. T. White, '29, and J. W. Helmstaedter, '28, contributed several numbers also. The coaching of the play was done by Ned Wayburn, of New York, whose fame as a chorus instructor is widespread.

"Mercy Sakes" was well presented and met with success, both here in Bethlehem and on tour. Performances were given in Philadelphia, Allentown, York, and other cities.

Back in Our Day

DEAN MCCONN

his favorite topic of conversation was,—Lehigh—a place for study.

The conversation drifted on until something "Dick" said reminded us of Hyphen Hall.

"Old Carothers used to throw a heavy line, too," I said. "According to his way of thinking Lehigh had the best Business course in the country, even though he did develop it himself. 'Nails' thought he was pretty hot as a teacher of economics. Whenever I had to see him about something he would always start in to talk in that big booming voice of his, and I swear I never saw anybody open his mouth as wide to talk as 'Nails' did his."

"He wasn't so very bad as a tennis coach," said "Dick," "and he sure could play tennis, couldn't he?" I agreed. "Dick" went on to talk about the bull that "Nails" used to heave in his lectures. It didn't matter what the subject was,—old "Nails" would usually spend more than half the period in talking about something else. This of course reminded me of Smith, the English Department head.

"Smith used to do the same thing," I said. "He always seemed to want to talk about 'Antediluvian Pedagogy,' or 'Anachronistic Literature of Syriac Origin,' or some other useless topic, in spite of our wanting to discuss the day's lesson."

"Yes," said "Dick," "I think Smith's idea of teaching us the value of English Literature was to make us remember a mass of trivial details that were unimportant. He couldn't bear having anyone differ with his point of view, either."

THE clouds of smoke had gradually enveloped the library. "Dick" Shepard was sprawled out in the big chair in front of the open fire. Seven cocktails in rapid succession had given to both he and I the mellowness and retrospection that are necessary to give the proper lustre to the old college days.

"Dick's" voice broke into my reverie. "I wonder just why we used to look up to those old birds at school in such awe. Gazing back now I can see that they were human beings like the rest of us."

"Yes," I said, "but they certainly didn't give that impression in those days! Remember how afraid we used to be of Dean McConn? He sure did seem a mighty awe-inspiring personage to us. I know that I was always afflicted with a severe attack of cold feet whenever I had to go to his office. He would sit there at his desk with that old, familiar smile on his face, which always reminded me of a cat watching a canary, and proceed to deal with me promptly and efficiently."

At this "Dick" began to laugh. "He used to hand out an awful line about how hard he worked for the interests of the boys, too. I think

"NAILS" CAROTHERS

"Oh, well," I said, "the trouble was that he knew so much about English that he just couldn't believe he might be wrong."

We smoked in silence for a while, thinking of the good old days, while another cocktail went down to defeat. Suddenly I began to laugh.

"What are you thinking about now?" asked "Dick." "Why," I said, "I was thinking of the Dispensary. Do you remember 'Doc' Bull and that long cigarette holder of his? He had to take it out of his mouth before any one could get near enough to shake hands with him. And the pills he gave us! Oh, Lord! I can hear him now asking me which I would rather take, white pills or pink pills." "Dick" laughed, too.

"He seemed to have only one remedy, and it didn't matter whether you had an earache or flat feet—you always got CC pills. And the smut lectures! I nearly killed myself laughing at them. Do you remember the slides he showed us in the Physics Building when we were Freshmen?"

"Talking of the Physics Building," I said, "brings back memories of Esty. I think, without doubt, that he loved to talk more than any one I have ever met."

"Yes," remarked "Dick," "it used to astonish me that one head could contain all the facts that he knew. After listening to him for a while, I could feel myself drowning in the flood of verbosity that flowed from his lips. He certainly did love to play the bore!"

"Well," I said, "Barry McNutt wasn't very far behind him. Do you remember the Physics lectures he gave? It was a crime the way we used to go to sleep while he discoursed on the properties and characteristics of Light and Sound."

Then "Dick" recalled the trouble we used to have with Barry's textbooks, and for a while we laughed over our anguished attempts to make sense out of them. They were so theoretical that in order to understand them you had to be a professor of physics yourself.

In such strain we talked on, picking out a character here and there, and laughing over the foibles of each. "Doc" Ullman came to my mind, and I wondered if he was still among his molecules and

R. M. CALDWELL SMITH

"DOC" ULLMAN

"DIEF"

Price Hall was a brewery."

"Dick" laughed. "Yes, and whenever he came round to show me how to 'titrate' I was always sure that I would have to run another sample in place of the one he ruined."

Still thinking of the Chem Building, we began to reminisce about Bradley Stoughton. "He had the damndest way," said "Dick." "He would write his textbooks, using language that we could misunderstand, and then in his lectures he would tell us to disregard the terminology in the book, and proceed to deliver the lecture using other terms. The result was that we had to use our own judgment, which was usually wrong."

"Yes, and he, too, liked to talk about every subject under the sun," I said. "Remember those Iron-Carbon diagrams? Weren't they terrible? Gosh, what a hard time we had with them!"

By this time our cigars were finished. After lighting up a couple more, we had another drink, and settled down in our chairs again. The snow was falling outside, and it brought to mind how the Campus looked in winter. I spoke of this to "Dick," and all at once he began to chuckle.

acid radicals, and whether he enjoyed the odor of hydrogen sulphide as much as ever.

I had to laugh when I thought of him experimenting on unbreakable cigars, invisible paints, and edible soaps. He loved to explain all about whatever he happened to be doing, and as he always used the technical and theoretical language, no one ever knew what he was talking about.

"Diefenderfer was a funny old duck," I remarked. "He liked to bull with the 'poys,' and was forever telling us about the days when

BRADLEY STOUGHTON

"I'm thinking of Harry Fretz," he said. "He used to look just like a mangy black bear in that old fur coat of his. With that old hat on, he certainly was a scream! Remember how he used to smoke his cigarettes down so far that he could hardly take the stub out of his lips without burning his fingers? I used to wonder how he did it."

I had to laugh at the description, it was so like Harry. "Dick" went on.

"Those Geology lectures were great, too. Harry used to discourse on Mystriosuchus and the Macrotoenopteris magnifolia, and the difference between the flora of the Triassic and the Cretaceous periods, while we sat there wondering what it all meant."

"Talking of Harry," I said, "remember his famous lecture on the Hope Diamond?" "Do I!" exclaimed "Dick," "I'll never forget it as long as I live!"

Then the conversation turned to Brother Turner. "I can see him now," I said, "sitting there at the table peering intently through a microscope, trying to see, the Lord only knows what. Remember his weather bureau?"

"Dick" did remember, and remarked that his chief memory of it was that the apparatus recorded sun at night, prevailing westerly winds when the wind was blowing from the North, and that the weather predictions were usually good—as jokes.

Thinking of Williams Hall also recalled to mind "Pop" Larkin. I thought of the many conversations I had with him in those unregenerate days,—conversations which were inclined to be monologues, because "Pop" always seemed to have so much to say that he couldn't afford to let any one else get a word in edgewise.

Indeed, the only time one could say anything was when he stopped for breath. According to "Pop," no engineer's education was complete without a course in Graphic Statics.

"HARRY"

BROTHER TURNER

"POP" LARKIN

The damn course had little or no practical value, but just the same it was one of "Pop's" hobbies, and he fought long and hard to get it into the general engineering curriculum.

To us it simply meant that two afternoons we had to go up at one o'clock to yell "present" and then go home until four when we went back to answer to final roll call. "Pop" Larkin, though, took it very seriously.

I happened to look up and the picture of the Lehigh Library hanging there caught my eye. I mentioned it to "Dick," who began to laugh.

"Do you remember Leach, the Librarian?" he asked. "The boys used to swear that he went around every day misplacing any book that had inadvertently been put back in its proper place. I don't believe that I ever found a book on the right shelf, and never heard that any one else did either. Leach was a funny old duck."

Talking of systems brought the Math Dept. back to mind. "Of all the funny systems," I said, "I think the Math Dept. had them all stopped. Remember the curve with which Bennett used to dope out the grades of the students? I always thought the stuff that one-third of the class must flunk was the bunk. I suppose that the system worked—sometimes."

"Yes," said "Dick," "and he certainly was a flop as a teacher of Calculus.

PROF. BENNETT

Thinking of Packer Hall, I could see in my mind's eye the two "opposites" of the Math Dept. I could just imagine them standing side by side on the steps of the building, "Lazy Jack" Ogleburn—tall and skinny, and old "Dutchy" Stocker—short and fat.

It was a laughable sight to see them together, and I could not help grinning at the memory. Indeed, when I thought of "Lazy Jack" wise-cracking about hypocycloids and tangents, and telling us not to be too sure of anything, for though we had been taught that 2 and 2 is four, it also makes 22 sometimes.

I remembered how he used to sit at his desk and throw bits of chalk at the board to point out various things written there so he wouldn't have to exert himself by walking over to do it. What a sight he made, sitting with his feet up on the desk watching us sweat over our problems at the boards.

And "Dutchy" Stocker! How he used to bawl us out when we didn't know our lesson. "Ach," poys," he used to say, "even der freshman know petter. Vy don't you staddy your york?"

And then when he was demonstrating some problem at the board, "Now ve put in der gonstant, wouble-u, and now she's retty to go!"

Poor "Dutchy," he almost used to cry over our stupidity, and he always took the whole period to lecture us on our failings.

"Dick" began to talk of Percy Hughes. "Percy" certainly was one forgetful prof," he said, and we began to talk of instances of Percy's forgetfulness.

It was even said of him that one day he met the Dean on the Campus and refused to speak to him, having forgotten who McConn was. Old Percy and his Psychology tests! How we used to laugh at them! We wondered if he dared risk taking one.

"Say, 'Dick,'" I said, "Remember Palmer? He always thought that we engineers were hopelessly narrow-minded. He thought that we ought to take more Arts courses, especially German. German, to him, was the only language, and he would have liked to see it required of every student."

"Yeah," responded "Dick," "and he used to get in strong with the Art students, too, by making them take the subjects he thought they should, rather than the ones they wanted or needed. I suppose he figured that he knew them better than they knew themselves."

"Dutchy" and "LAZY JACK"

"FRED"

The open fireplace in front of us, and the general atmosphere (with the exception of the cocktails at our elbows) made us think of Drown Hall.

"I wonder if Fred Trafford is still on the job," said "Dick." "He used to have every one calling him Fred after he had known them for two or three minutes. Do you remember how he always looked at the silver in the houses when he went to dinner to see if there was any that had been 'misaid' by the Hotel Bethlehem?"

"You bet," I answered, "Fred was enthusiastic over his work, even though the 'Y' didn't try any soul-saving stunts. We surely did appreciate his services to Lehigh!"

Thinking of Drown Hall also brought to mind Walter Okeson. "'Okey' threw an awful line, didn't he?" I said.

"My God, yes!" exclaimed "Dick."

"Remember that old line of his about 'Honor before Victory' and 'Defeat before victories.' He certainly knew the art of making alibis."

We talked on, laughing over memories of "Okey" discoursing on his favorite topic—Lehigh, and the great men who had graduated from it.

He could sit and talk by the hour on this subject, and frequently did. In our opinion he was head cheer leader for the Lehigh Alumni.

Another favorite subject of "Okey's" was "Great football games I have refereed," how we used to dread getting him started on it.

We finished another cocktail and cigar, and "Dick" wondered if the old mail man, Davey, still delivered the mail to the Hill. "It would seem funny," he said, "if some one else were to do it. Old Davey seemed to know every man in college, and moreover remembered almost all the returning alumni. He never forgot a face or a name."

"OKEY"

"I'll tell you some one else that has the Lehigh complex badly," said I, "and that is 'Skipper' Eckfeldt. I think he would just curl up and die if he was to go away from the University. Remember how he used to show us stuff that he had made himself, and tell us how good it was? I don't think I'll ever forget his tall, lanky, awkward figure, standing there initiating us into the mysteries of Polaris and the Celestial Sphere. 'Skipper' sure was there!"

"Yeah," said "Dick," "and that lousy old pipe he used to carry round in his mouth—Lord, what a boiler it was!"

And so we talked on, touching on this and that man, recalling incidents that had occurred, sipping our drinks and smoking.

We spoke of "Bosey" Reiter, and his talks to us on the "proper attitude of mind." We laughed at the memory of him standing there before the students at some great smoker and begging us on bended knee to stand behind our team, telling us that if we did so the team would win.

We recalled the story of the negro, and the bear that went "Wood! Wood!" which he told at every opportunity, and which at last became a Lehigh tradition.

How he used to discourse on the "right psychology" to maintain! He loved to talk—indeed, we used to think that his chief pleasure in life was to listen to himself rolling the words off his tongue.

Speaking of "Bosey" led us to think of the Gymnasium, and so we naturally began to talk of "Mike" and "Jimmy."

"Those two old birds were rare!" said "Dick." "Remember how they used to bawl us out for trying to get towels without paying our four cents?"

"DAVE"

"SKIPPER" ECKFELDT

"BOSEY"

"Yes," I answered, " and I don't believe any one has ever seen one of them out without the other. They might have been twins. "They were a hard-boiled pair."

By this time the cocktails we had consumed had begun to make us drowsy, and, as we were nearly asleep in our chairs, "Dick" suggested that we call off the session and go to bed.

I agreed, and so we staggered arm in arm up the stairs, still talking about the glories of Lehigh and the might of her Alumni.

"JIMMY" and "MIKE"

The R. O. T. C., Its Origin and Development

ON looking back to my experience from 1905 to 1920, as President of my Alma Mater, Lehigh, I find nothing that gives me so much pleasure and pride as the connection I was privileged to have with the institution and development of the R. O. T. C. It may be well for the EPHONIA to have a short summary of the origin of the R. O. T. C. It was due wholly to the far-sighted sagacity and patriotism of General Leonard Wood. In May, 1913, when he was Chief of Staff, I received from him a letter asking the aid of our College Presidents in the establishment of Summer Military Training Camps for college students. Our University responded cordially and heartily, and of the 159 students from 61 institutions, present at the Gettysburg Camp in 1913, Lehigh was represented by eight students—H. E. Lenker, '13; J. Dennis Kavanaugh, '14; J. Russell Danner, '14; N. F. Matheson, '15; Delozier Davidson, '15; F. C. Brockman, '15; C. S. Haug, '15, and M. W. Kresge, '16. Yale and Cornell sent the largest delegations, thirteen each, and Lehigh came in next with her eight men. Of these eight men, four served in the war—Kresge, Davidson, Lenker and Matheson—and Davidson gave his life. In 1913, there was also a student military training camp held at the Presidio of Monterey, California, with an attendance of 61 men from 29 institutions. At the joint request of General Wood and myself the Presidents of the Universities of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Michigan, Alabama, California, and Lehigh, the President of the College of the City of New York, and the Superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute, formed an Advisory Committee to promote the camping project. The camps grew in 1914 to 667, in 1915 to 3406, and in 1916 to 20,484, and the Advisory Committee from 9 to 19. The attendance was increased in 1915 and 1916 by the enrolling of numbers of young business and professional men who volunteered.

When our country entered the war in 1917, the Government took over our organization during the war, and since then the Government has actively supported the Military Training Camps Association of which I today hold the Honorary Presidency.

Of the R. O. T. C., General C. J. Bailey, Commanding General of the Third Corps Area, said some years ago, at a meeting in Baltimore, which I attended: "The R. O. T. C. is the best military asset we have." Surely a great tribute from a great general.

Military training is today recognized as an important and valuable part of college education. Of it President Richards said recently to the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives (at a meeting at the Capitol which I attended): "I consider military training a particularly good thing for engineering students. It is recognized as such by many of the outstanding engineering colleges in America. The engineer needs to have this military training just as much as he needs trigonometry, calculus, or other subjects." And quoting from the student Colonel of Ohio State University (who also spoke before the Committee), Dr. Richards further expressed his agreement with the view, "that if the Government assumes the right to conscript young men, it ought to give them proper training in the thing which it will require them to do when they are conscripted."

It should be a matter of great satisfaction and pride to Lehigh students, that in the R. O. T. C., they have not only an opportunity to enlarge their general educational training, but they gain an exceptional advantage in being able to render to our country a valuable patriotic service in being prepared by their training to defend our country if occasion should arise, and in so doing to aid in the assurance of peace, pursuant to General Washington's statement to Congress on January 8, 1790, when he said:

By, DR. HENRY STURGIS DRINKER,
President Emeritus of the University.

Acknowledgments

OUR success in the compilation of material and data for this volume of the EPITOME could not be achieved without the assistance of those friends who willingly sacrificed their time and efforts. Especially, we wish to thank:

Mr. Francis M. Berkemeyer and Mr. Robert E. Rinker, of the Berkemeyer, Keck & Co. Press, for their willing advice, excellent co-operation, and for the conscientious work put upon the printing of this volume.

Mr. R. S. Knox and the Northern Engraving Company, for the quality service rendered.

Mr. William McCaa, photographer, for his valuable services.

The David J. Molloy Company, for the high quality cover on this book and their prompt and considerate service.

The Sanders-Reinhardt Co., Inc., for their assistance in making cuts upon short notice when desired.

Our Senior associates, for their undelayed co-operation in the compilation of the Senior section.

And, finally, the Student Body, for their interest, and their acceptance of this volume.

We further appreciate the efforts of those above in aiding us to publish at this early date this volume of the EPITOME.

∴ Acknowledgment ∴

To the 1928 Epitome Advertisers

whose loyal support has made possible this edition. Although the demands on our advertisers were greater this year than ever before, they responded nobly, and due to their unselfish generosity, the staff has been enabled to present the 1928 EPITOME in an edition that surpasses all of those heretofore published.

In order to show our appreciation of the generous support given us by the merchants whose advertisements appear on the following pages, let us, in turn, give them our patronage and support.

MEDITATION

We were sitting alone in the fire glow,
Just you and I alone;
And the flickering light falls softly
On a beauty that's all your own—
It gleams where your round smooth shoulder
From a graceful neck sweeps down;
And I would not exchange your beauty
For the best dressed belle in town.

I have drawn the curtain closer
And from my easy chair
I stretch my hand toward you
Just to feel that you are there;
And your breath is laden with perfume
And my thoughts about you twine,
And I feel my pulses beating
As your spirit is mingled with mine.

And the woes of the world have vanished
When I've pressed my lips to yours,
For to feel your life-blood flowing
Is to me the best of cures;
You have given me inspiration,
For many a soulful rhyme:
You're the finest bottle of whiskey
I've seen for a long, long time!

"Count Everything on Earth"

Veeder

Products: CYCLOMETERS FOR BICYCLES AND MOTORCYCLES, TO RECORD DISTANCE TRAVELED; ODOMETERS FOR MOTOR TRUCKS, TO REGISTER MILEAGE; COUNTERS FOR RECORDING THE PRODUCTION OF MACHINES; SPEED COUNTERS FOR COUNTING REVOLUTIONS OF SHAFTS OR FLYWHEELS; TACHOMETERS FOR INDICATING IN REVOLUTIONS PER MINUTE THE SPEED OF MOTORS, PRIME MOVERS, GENERATORS OR ANY REVOLVING PART. ALSO FINE DIE CASTINGS REQUIRING ACCURACY AND UNIFORMITY.

The No. 21 Speed Counter shown above registers number of revolutions (per minute) of a motor, engine, dynamo, line shafting, machine spindle or any revolving part. The point is held against the end of the revolving shaft; the instrument pressed lightly when count is commenced; pressure released when the timing is over. Push-clutch starts or stops recording mechanism instantly, giving exact R. P. M. readings without use of stop-watch. Price, \$3.50. (Cut less than  $\frac{1}{2}$  size.)

Veeder Counters are made for every machine that should have one—all the models are shown in the Veeder counter booklet. Write for copy of this counter cyclopaedia.

A thermometer is unnecessary when giving a baby a bath. If the baby turns red, the water is too hot; if the baby turns blue, the water is too cold; but if the baby turns white you'll know that it needed a bath.
